Spada Dies Quietly

The Ghost Said, Confess

The NEWS is that union labor demands that all United States railroads be nationalized, owned by the people, run by the government. Reason? Private owners do not know how to run them. The roads would be bought, not confiscated, presumably, which would mean twenty to thirty more billions of national debt.

Andre Spada, a bandit, calling himself "an honor bandit," because he sometimes divided with the poor, had his head chopped off in Corsica by Mr. Deibler, of Paris, who travels from place to place with his portable guillotine. French writers will enjoy telling of that execution and the Corsican bandit's last hours.

He slept so soundly that it was difficult to wake him at three in the morning for the guillotining, declined the rum and cigarette which the French Republic gives to men and women just before they are beheaded.

The bandit, whom French police had hunted with armored cars and airplanes, attended a short mass, embraced the chaplain at the last moment. "The advocate-general, waking him, said:

"Spada, your last hour has come. Courage."

"Courage never failed me," said the bandit. It never did. Spada went under the guillotine blade, and perhaps beyond, to meet another Corsican who never knew fear, Napoleon Bonaparte—in case the latter went in the wrong direction when he left St. Helena. Spada, who had no misgivings, told the

Yankee Trails, Sixth Again

By Associated Press

Lymington, England, June 22—Gerard B. Lambert's American yacht Yankee again lagged far in the wake of England's J class yachts today, finishing sixth in a field of seven in a 38-mile race.

T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour, which led the way home in yesterday's Royal Yacht Club regatta off Isle of Wight, was first across the finish line again today but the time allowance gave the victory to Astra, which followed Endeavour by four minutes.

Candida was third. Then came Shamrock V., Britannia, Yankee and Velsheda.

The American yacht was 12 minutes and 26 seconds behind Endeavour.

Daily Double Pays $20.10

Narragansett Park, R. I., June 22—Daily double winners here today were rewarded $20.10, a short price due to a pair of favorites coming home in front in the first and third races.

A new record handle of $28,690 was wagered on today's daily double, a tremendous increase over yesterday's previous mark.

General A. took the first race in two, $6.30. Molly Greenock paid $5.20 in winning the second.

BRAVES DROP 1ST: SOX TRIMING, 4-1

YALE BEATS HARVARD BY 11 LENGTHS

By Associated Press

New London, Conn., June 22—Yale's big, smooth varsity completed its clean sweep of the Thames for the second straight year today, crushing Harvard with a relentless 300 yard beating in the four mile pull.

It wasn't a boat race staged for the big crowd, held over from last night when a sudden rise in the wind forced the first opponement in 37 years.

It was a rout from the moment the two eights dug their oars into the sunlit waters of the Thames for the drive from the railroad bridge upstream to the finish at Bartlett's Cove.

WORST BEATING

It was almost impossible to judge the margin of Yale's victory, one of the greatest in the modern history of the regatta.

Sweeping along smoothly, as though out for a practice time trial, Yale, pace set by big Jim Castle of Honolulu, finished that way with estimates of the Harvard defeat ranging all the way up to an eighth of a mile.

Yale was timed for the four miles in 20 minutes, 19 seconds, giving the Elis a margin of 45 seconds over the Harvard crew, stroked by Ed Simmons of Baltimore.

Harvard's time was 21:04. The record for the course is 20:14 2-5 set by Yale in 1926.

PARADE AT FINISH

Figuring the seconds into lengths, the official time gave Yale a margin of something better than 11 lengths, on a basis of four seconds to a length, though today's water seemed a bit swifter than that.

It was the worst beating a Harvard crew has taken from Yale on the Thames in 41 years. Back in 1894, Yale beat Harvard by over 13 lengths, a margin of 52½ seconds in time. In 1888 Yale won by one minute, 14 seconds.

Yale at the start took a quick lead. The Elis pulled out two lengths in front in the first half mile, stretched that another half length in the next half mile, and led by three full lengths at the end of the first mile.

HOME RUN BY MELLO IN 1ST INNING

Chicago, Ill., June 22—Rain started falling here this afternoon as the Red Sox and White Sox opened their four game series. Despite the shower, there was no delay.

Lee Tietje, and Gordon Rhodes were the rival hurlers.

Oscar Melillo opened the game by hitting the second ball pitched for a home run to give the Hose an early 1 to 0 lead.

The White Sox evened Melillo's homer when they counted in the last half of the first on a walk and a single.

DIGHTON DOG TRACK WINS COURT VICTORY

Dog racing will be continued at the costly new track in Dighton until the Supreme Court decides the issue, the Boston Evening American learned today.

With confusion existing on all sides, due to an order of Judge James C. Donnelly of Superior court granting an injunction to the town of Dighton against the track, the American asked Judge Donnelly to explain.

Judge Donnelly stated first that the injunction has not yet been signed by him.

He said he did not expect to sign it today.

He said that an appeal on the part of the dog track promoters would nullify the injunction until the Supreme Court decides.

NO INTERIM WRIT

He explained that the only thing that could halt the dog racing, insofar as his court is concerned, is an interim injunction, which

Braves Field, June 22—Ben Cantwell was the Braves' hope of getting an even break in today's double header.

Charlie Root, veteran right hander, was the Cubs' nightcap selection.

Though they collected 16 hits off Larry "Lefty" French and Big Bill Lee in the opener, the Warriors dropped their third straight decision in four starts against the Windy City crew by a score of 7 to 4.

A five-run rally in the second, at the expense of Danny MacFayden, who suffered his first Tribal defeat, enabled the visitors to sew up the verdict.

The Cubs pounded Somerville Danny for six hits before he was relieved by Walter Betts with one gone in the second.

"Huckleberry" allowed only four hits and one run until he was removed for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. Benny Benton was found for a run in the ninth.

"Lefty" French was relieved by W Lee when the Braves put over their third run in the seventh.

Eddie Moriarty, Holy Cross captain, started his first game for the tribe, going to second base and batted out a 400-foot double and a sizzling single as well as sparkling in the field.

Jim O'Dea, star rookie catcher of the Cubs, was the big sticker of the day, contributing a triple, double, and two singles to the visitors' 13-hit attack.

Each team had 11 men left on bases.

CAPE CELEBRATES OPENING OF BRIDGES OVER CANAL

THRONGS TO ATTEND FETE IN TWO TOWNS

Bourne, June 22—All Cape Cod gathered today to celebrate the opening of its two $3,600,000 bridges over the Cape Cod Canal.

Thousands poured into this town and Sagamore for the exercises, parade and banquet that will mark the dedication.

The largest detail of state police on record—115 officers—reinforced 50 town police and 100 special deputies. They arrived early to handle the vast throngs and the dense motor traffic.

Towering above swift currents of the big ditch, the lofty steel girders supporting the roadway afforded a striking picture of grace and beauty to the waiting multitude.

The Bourne bridge, larger of the two, has been awarded first prize for the most beautiful bridge built in the country during the past year.

Exercises opened this morning with a parade of coast guard boats through the Canal.

Starting from the Buzzards Bay end, the cutter Algonquin of Woods Hole, commanded by Lieutenant-Commander Lyndon Spencer, and the Fauncs of New Bedford, under Boatswain A. F. Remick, passed through as far as the Sandwich breakwater and return.

The two ships then tied up at the State Pier at Buzzards Bay, where they will be open to visitors today and tomorrow.

An air show by Army, Navy and National Guard planes ushered in the afternoon ceremonies.

PLANES OVERHEAD

Roaring squadrons of fighting planes swooped and dived above the Canal as troops formed for the mammoth parade.

Ball games at Sagamore and Bourne, starting at 11 a. m. kept the waiting throngs entertained.

The parade was scheduled to start at 3:30 p. m. from Trading Post Corner in Bourne, where the Pilgrims used to exchange furs and wampum with the Dutch from New Amsterdam.

Military, civil and veteran organizations united to march in the procession over the two new bridges through Bourne and Sagamore.

Major General Daniel Needham of the National Guard was chief marshal and commander of the first division.

Captain Oscar Bohlin, and Chief William R. Crump, Jr., assistant marshals, were in charge of the second and third divisions.

GUARD UNITS ARRIVE

National Guard regiments arrived early to lead the first division of the parade.

Members of the Grand Army, the United Spanish War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, and other military organizations and auxiliaries made up the second division.

State, county and town officials in autos led the third division, followed by patriotic associations and bands, resplendent in dress uniforms, banners and flags flying in the wind.

The fourth division of the big parade was made up of floats provided by Cape Cod merchants and patriotic organizations. Historic scenes from the Cape's past featured these displays.

Many of the bands and drum corps in the parade planned to compete tomorrow in the Legion drum corps competition at Bourne.

Governor James M. Curley and his staff are scheduled to arrive Monday officials will review the parade of the junction of the Old Country road with the line of march in Bournedale.

At another stand in Sagamore Chief Marshal Needham and his staff will review the marchers.

Tonight the governor and other guests of honor will be tendered a banquet at the new State Pier in Buzzards Bay. Charles H. Gifford of Bournedale will preside and it is expected that representatives of the nation, state and Cape Cod communities will attend.

Dancing this evening from 8 to 12 at the Town Hall in Bourne will top off the day's festivities.

FIRST IMPROVEMENTS

The two new bridges which have occasioned all this celebration are the first step in improvements to the Cape approaches, of which the total cost will be over $31,000,000.

Traffic jams caused by opening the two old Canal bridges to permit ships to pass beneath have extended for miles in both directions during previous summers, especially in the busy Sunday and holiday hours.

Ships of the largest size now will be able to pass beneath the 135 foot spans of the new bridges, without having to wait for draws to be opened.

Traffic congestion, it is expected, will be wholly eliminated, especially after the new roads and traffic circles on either side have been completed.

Only tall-sparred racing yachts such as Yankee and Westamos will be unable to sail beneath the new bridges. The Normandie, largest liner in the world, could just scrape beneath, providing there was water enough to float her in the Canal.

The road from Buzzards Bay to Bourne already has been widened and construction will continue to Sagamore.

A scenic highway on the north side of the canal will replace the present road, which will disappear when widening operations increase the width of the Canal from 100 to 540 feet.

The bridge at the Bourne end of the Canal cost $1,650,000 and contains 6500 tons of steel.

It was built by United States Army engineers and Fay, Spofford and Thorndike of Boston from plans by Sears and Pressey. The topmost arch of the bridge is 274 feet high, and the length of the bridge is 2684 feet.

This is nearly the same length as that of the Brooklyn bridge in New York.

SAME HEIGHT

The Sagamore bridge is of the same height, but is only 1633 feet from end to end. It cost $1,350,000. More than 3800 men were employed in building the two spans. Construction is of the continuous truss type.

When the canal banks are cut back to widen the channel for ships the shores will be lined with granite blocks to prevent the sandy Cape soil from washing down again into the Canal.

The work will be done as a WPA project, employing hundreds of local workmen.

In addition to the two spidery highway bridges, a new railroad bridge is being constructed at Bourne, having a draw which will remain open to allow the passage of shipping except when a train is due.

RAZE OLD BRIDGES

As soon as the new structures are officially open to traffic, the draws in the old Bourne and Sagamore bridges will be razed and they will never be seen again. Monday the work of demolishing them will start.

Many business places, left stranded by relocation of the Cape roads, are planning to move.

Canal Costs

The Cape Cod Canal, for which the United States paid 11½ million dollars when it purchased it from its builders in 1928, will have cost the taxpayers many times that sum by the time improvements are complete.

Up to a year ago improvements costing 17 millions had been paid for, and the new bridges and widening now under way will nearly double that sum.

Shipping, however, has a far better waterway for its use. The depth of the big ditch is being increased from 25 to 32 feet, and its width from 100 to 540 feet, making it navigable to all except the very largest steamships.

Motorists who escape the traffic jams that used to form at the bridge bottle-necks will also benefit largely from the improvements.

BRUNO'S PLOT TO KIDNAP 20 BABY BARED

By LOU WEDEMAR
(Copyright, 1935, by United Service)

Trenton, N. J., June 22—A sensational new angle in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping which will be used if Bruno Richard Hauptmann wins a new trial has been opened by New Jersey state police investigators.

Lieutenant Arthur Keaten has located a baby which, authorities believe, Hauptmann intended to kidnap and pass off on Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon as the Lindbergh child, in order to assure himself time for a get-away after receiving the ransom.

While the name and address of the child and its parents were withheld, the investigators were informed Hauptmann had been "reconnoitering" near its home during the ransom negotiations.

Hauptmann has been identified by the baby's parents as a man whom they saw "acting mysteriously" around their house. The child sharply resembled Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., three years ago.

Although Hauptmann, of course, denies it, the state will charge—if there should be another trial—that he intended to kidnap the child a few hours before meeting Dr. Condon and give him the second kidnaped baby before an alarm was raised.

This "double double-cross" was made unnecessary by Dr. Condon's accepting the sleeping-suit as a token, and, later, by his accepting the kidnaper's word that the child would be found alive on a boat off the New England coast.

Hauptmann, the investigators believe, feared Colonel Lindbergh might suspect his son was dead—as he was—and refuse to pay without a baby being handed over to Dr. Condon.

Information about Hauptmann's plan for this second kidnaping reached District Attorney Samuel J. Foley in the Bronx shortly after the ex-machine gunner's arrest, but it was not fully investigated at first. It was pointed out that even if the state had been able to prove Hauptmann's unusual interest in the other child, mention of the matter in court might have confused the trial jury, to which they believed they had presented sufficient evidence for conviction.

On the other hand, this and several other points not presented at the first trial might be submitted to a jury if, by any chance, a new trial should be ordered.

The high state official who made public this hitherto secret angle of his case said:

"This is just one more proof of the almost incredible audacity with which the kidnaper went in his attempt to plan and carry out a perfect crime."

"You killed me. I am Ares's ghost. You had better confess. You know you killed me."

Torrest thought it unwise to ignore the advice of a ghost and confessed accordingly.

The Mexican crawled back into the cabin, Menses seized his controls in time to save the ship that was rushing at random, close to the water.

Freed as Bigamist, Mrs. Bond Tackles Divorce

Much-Arraigned Woman Plans New Court Appearance

Springfield, June 22—Mrs. May F. Bond, 30, who has been in and out of the courts of law many times since 1926, today was celebrating her acquittal on a charge of bigamy.

Judge James E. Davis, in district court, found her not guilty after counsel had submitted an agreed statement of facts.

The story of Mrs. Bond and of her husband, Charles H. Bond, 48, has been a series of charges and counter charges of virtually every phase of matrimonial disagreement.

Mrs. Bond, according to testimony, married Harry Fenton, alias Daly, in New York in 1930. Three years later Fenton was convicted of the murder of his landlady and sentenced to life imprisonment.

FIRST APPEARANCE

That was Mrs. Bond's first recorded appearance in court, for the conviction of her husband was based largely on testimony given by her.

She married Bond in Reno, Nev., in 1927, a short time after Bond had divorced his first wife.

As there was some discussion concerning whether his decree was final and his marriage legal, they were married again in 1932 in New York.

VIRTUALLY FREE

The bigamy charge against Mrs. Bond grew out of the fact that Fenton is still living and that no formal divorce had been granted.

But counsel for Mrs. Bond maintained, and established, that New York considered the wife of a life prisoner divorced.

Next Mrs. Bond petitioned for separate support, and in February was awarded $25 a week by the judge.

Bond then took the initiative, and began what achieved considerable prominence as the alleged "baby buying" case.

He charged his wife had deceived him for seven years into thinking that their son, Francis, now 7, was their own. He further alleged that she adopted him, and had forged his name to the adoption papers.

WINS AGAIN

Mrs. Bond won that court battle, too, when Judge Joseph H. McCoole ruled that the husband must have known the baby had been adopted, dismissed the case in Dedham probate court.

A few weeks later, Bond was held $1000 when Mrs. Bond appeared in the same Dedham court with a black eye and charged her husband with forcing his way into her apartment and attacking her.

A short time later, Bond, again free of custody, charged his wife with bigamy, and she herself was held for a time in $1000.

Free of that, it is understood that a petition for divorce from Bond is now under way.

British, Irish Free State Reunion Pact Seen Near

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Dublin, June 22—Irish Free State and British statesmen are preparing for a formal reconciliation, high government quarters indicated today.

President Eamon de Valera, whose friendly speeches regarding relations with England started the ball rolling, expects to be called to London soon to discuss political and commercial agreements.

The following proposals, it was learned, have tentatively been listed for possible inclusion in any pact or group of pacts:

1. Elimination of the office of Governor General of the Free State and inclusion of the title and duties of the office in that of the Presidency.

2. A guarantee that the Free State will always help defend Britain and will never give aid in any fashion to any enemy of England.

3. Provision for a plebiscite by which the people of the Free State could determine themselves whether they wish to retain some connection with Britain or have a full republic.

4. A pledge by the Irish Government it would never completely sever political relations with Britain unless the people so ordered such separation by plebiscite.

5. Elimination by Britain of jurisdiction it now holds over certain Irish ports.

6. Mutual tariff reductions and preferences.

Statements of James H. Thomas, secretary of state for dominions, on the Irish question this week in the House of Commons have been given much prominence here, especially his remark:

"It is only fair to say that the real difference between the Free State and ourselves is not alone on economic, but also on the political side. But any efforts at a reapprochement that would settle these questions would be welcomed by the British government."

Wire Plea

SENATE CALLS FOR QUICK PROBE

By Universal Service

Washington, June 22—Declaring they were facing starvation and beset with disease, the FERA colonists in Alaska wired a desperate plea for help which moved the Senate to swift investigation.

In a telegram sent from Palmer, the colonists said no houses had been built, expectant mothers were without medical attention and there was grave danger of disastrous epidemics.

Over 250 families comprise the colony in the Matanuska Valley. Instead of the paradise they expected, they are facing privations in a wilderness, they complained.

Resolution requiring a full report from Relief Administrator Hopkins was quickly adopted by the Senate after Senator Vandenburg, (R-Mich.) gave a dramatic report of the colonists plight.

Hopking at once said he would aid the investigation and announced he was sending Eugene Carr to the settlement as his representative.

Dire Distress

A wire from Patrick J. Hemmer and Mrs. L. M. Sandvick etched the dire distress of the pioneers in these 40 terse words:

"Six weeks passed. Nothing done. No houses, wells, roads. Inadequate machinery, tools. Government food undelivered. Commissary prices exorbitant. Educational facilities for season doubtful.

"Apparently men sent to pick political plums. Irwin and Washington officials OK. Hands tied. Colonists cooperating. Request immediate investigation."

The senders signed themselves "colonists' representatives." Vandenberg's demand for a quiz was backed by Senators LaFollette (P-Wis.) Shipstead (F-Minn.) and Nye (R-N. D.) from whose states the farmer pioneers were drawn.

Vandenberg buttressed his case by quoting excerpts from colonists' letters to relatives at home, revealing these alleged conditions:

Nearly all the colonists ill, some adults bed-ridden with bronchitis and children with measles, and with but one physician and one nurse for the community of 1000.

Commissary bare of medical supplies, expectant mothers without medical attention, and "disastrous epidemics" feared.

Milk restricted to children under five years old, promise of free groceries until the colony becomes self-sustaining repudiated, and commissary charging higher prices than independent grocers.

Coughing Constant

Vandenberg quoted a letter of Mrs. Fred Rots, written to relatives at Plymouth, Mich., and published in the Detroit Times. It read:

"All night long, you can hear children and adults coughing. There are several bad cases of bronchitis.

"Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin people are getting supplies from home. We believe the government is doing everything possible, but there have been so many blunders.

"The buildings are better than we expected, but most of the work remains for the future, as no land has been cleared as we supposed would be."

She concluded on this courageous note:

"Pray for us, dear folks at home. We need the mighty hand of God in this undertaking and united prayer of people everywhere."

Lindy Hides on Maine Isle

By Universal Service

North Haven, Me., June 21—Leaving behind a world hailing him as a pioneer in a new field of medical science, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh is seeking seclusion with his son on the Morrow estate on this island, flying here from New York.

The big German police dog which has been trained to stand vigilant guard over Colonel Lindbergh's son, Jon, was on the private landing field when the famous aviator swooped down from the skies, and had to be put on a leash before the colonel stepped from the plane. The dog takes his job seriously.

Colonel Lindbergh's mother-in-law, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, has been at the island estate with her small grandson for the past four days. It could not be learned, however, whether Mrs. Anne Lindbergh had arrived.

Oath Bill Near Enactment

The teachers' oath bill appeared today to be certain of becoming law, only the formalities of enactment and of Governor Curley's signature being required.

Senator Henry Parkman Jr., of Boston, did his best to recall it, to tack an amendment on it which would result in taking a great part of the strength out of it.

Every time he attempted to read his proposed amendment, President James G. Moran ruled that he must confine himself to the subject of reconsideration.

The first roll call vote was 11 to 9 against reconsideration. The second was 16 to 8 against.

Sebastian to Fight Army Ouster on Secret Bridal

By Associated Press

New York, June 22—Lieutenant Henry A. Sebastian, former West Point football star facing dismissal from the army because of his secret marriage while still a cadet, today based hope of averting discharge on an appeal which may be carried to President Roosevelt.

He said he would appeal the verdict of a court-martial which found him guilty of swearing falsely while a cadet that he was not married when he returned from leaves on September 20, 1933, and May 8, 1934, although he had been married secretly to Harriet Hagman, former Vanities dancer.

The verdict, announced yesterday by Major General Lucius R. Holbrook, commanding the First Division, carries mandatory discharge from the service, although it must be reviewed by General Holbrook and War Department officials and finally confirmed by the President.

Lieutenant Sebastian said he thought the sentence "for so trivial a matter was unjust."

"I didn't have any intent to deceive the authorities when I swore I was unmarried," he said, "because I thought my marriage in 1931 was illegal."

His defense at the trial last week was based on the contention the 1931 ceremony was illegal because he used an assumed name. A second marriage was performed in June, 1934, after Sebastian had been graduated from West Point.

The secret marriage was disclosed when Mrs. Sebastian filed suit for separation after a drinking party on Governors Island on April 6 during which, she charged, Sebastian hit her.

BYRD Aide Wife's PLUNGE

QUIZ LAWYER IN MYSTERY

Washington, June 22—Mrs. Lucille T. English, 29-year-old wife of a Byrd expedition leader, lay near death today from injuries suffered in a five-story plunge.

Police questioned Harold W. Starr, 26, a Washington lawyer, who, they said, was in the English apartment at the time of the plunge.

Mrs. English, who recently welcomed her husband, Lieutenant Robert English, back from Antarctica after atwo-year absence, either jumped or fell from a kitchen window of her apartment late yesterday.

Detaining the young lawyer for investigation, police quoted him as saying that he called on Mrs. English in the role of adviser.

She seemed despondent, he said, and in going to the kitchen she said she was going to mix two drinks.

When she failed to return he investigated and discovered her lying on the lawn beneath the kitchen window.

Mystery Bullets

Other witnesses told police they had heard her scream and one, Mrs. Emily Morrison, said she saw Mrs. English clutch vainly at an awning before falling.

At the hospital the young wife, a former artists' model and one of the most attractive young matrons in the Navy set here, was found to be paralyzed below the waist from a broken neck.

Police investigating the case expressed perplexity at five 38-calibre bullets. Four were found in Starr's pockets and the fifth near where Mrs. English fell.

A pistol later was found under a mattress in the apartment.

Lieutenant English told police the pistol was his. He said he had met Starr only once.

Wales Is 41; Plans Secret

By Universal Service

London, June 22—He is 41 today. He's still a bachelor, and there's no royal romance and marriage yet in sight for him. He is—Edward, Prince of Wales.

The prince's equerries are silent on the private plans made for the celebration of the 41st birthday of the heir to England's throne, but it is believed the prince will remain in London.

The prince had been expected to take a villa at Biarritz, on the French Riviera, this summer, but the delicate health of King George prevented this. The prince's parties last summer at Biarritz were features of the season.

It's summertime today. But the fact doesn't seem to convince the weatherman, who says it will be partly cloudy and probably showers. Summer arrived at 4:38 this morning.

Nazi Has Own 'Tragedy'

Berlin, June 22—Heinz Mueller, 22, was arrested for murder today in Germany's first "American Tragedy" case.

Police said he confessed drowning his sweetheart, Anne Marie Keil, 24, an expectant mother, in a Berlin resort lake.

Authorities said Mueller dumped the girl from a rowboat but that she, struggling to get back, pulled him into the water. After a battle Mueller succeeded in breaking away.

He said her drowning was an accident, but later broke down and admitted the crime, the authorities said.

Radio Plea Rounds Up 2 Bite Victims

By Universal Service.

New York, June 22—Two men were saved here from the possibility of death from rabies, when health authorities utilized the radio to broadcast an alarm.

One of the men, Gerald Gordon, brought his little white poodle, Skippy, to the Ellen Prince Speyer animal hospital last Tuesday, after the dog had bitten him and Charles May, a friend, each in the left hand.

Wednesday the dog died. Routine examination showed it was a sufferer from rabies.

Jordan could not be reached at the address he gave hospital attaches. This afternoon health department authorities decided to ask radio stations to appeal to the two men to come forward for treatment.

May heard the alarm over the radio. He induced a truck driver friend to rush him to New York, where he picked up Jordan.

They hastened to the hospital. Today they will begin receiving the Pasteur anti-hydrophobia treatment, which will require about six weeks.

BILLIONS Stolen From POOR

HUGE REALTY FRAUDS BARED

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

New York, June 22—Sensational disclosures in what Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D), Illinois, calls a "racket" involving billions, will be made when the special House committee investigating real estate reorganizations holds hearings here next week, members of the committee said today.

Sabath, who heads the committee, declared attempts to intimidate investigators, who have been uncovering losses greater than those of the Wall Street crash, will not deter the committee from pressing its inquiry.

He told the Boston Evening American:

"Some 4,000,000 and indirectly 20,000,000 citizens have been affected by these losses.

"Of approximately $10,000,000,000 real estate bonds outstanding, we have found upward of $8,000,000,000 are in default.

"The people who have been the ones to suffer in the real estate field have been the thrifty, hard-working citizens of the nation, not the Wall Street speculating class.

Put on Dole

"In the 23 years I've been in Washington, I've never encountered such a racket as the one the committee uncovered in this investigation.

"As a result of it, many thousands are on public relief, notwithstanding the fact they have anywhere from a few hundred to a few thousands of dollars invested in these defaulted real estate bonds.

"While they have been receiving no income from their investments, members of many so-called bondholders' protective committees and their associates have been drawing excessive fees and expenses.

"Many of these poor investors have, for them, four and five cents on the dollar, parted with their bonds on recommendation of some of these protective committees.

"Valuable properties—lots of them—should not have gone into receivership at all.

"Some brokerage houses that issued the bonds originally have named their own men to serve on the protective committees.

Pick Bones Clean

"One witness testified:

"'Many of these houses of issue, because they had the names of the bondholders, became scavengers of the depression. They had already taken the meat off the carcass in their wild promotion schemes and over-issuance of bonds.

"Now they have come back to pick the last piece of meat off the bones of these properties.'

"We have found instances where the protective committees destroy the value and income of the property to enable the house of issue to purchase back the bonds for a song.

"I am glad to say that since this House committee began its investigation, the market value of many bond issues has increased 200 to 500 per cent.

"Fees have been cut as much as 60 per cent, where formerly lawyers, receivers and protective committees had eaten up entire rentals and income.

"Wherever we find "fly" or dishonest deals, we are calling attention of the courts and prosecuting authorities to them.

"On the evidence obtained to date, and our investigation is not half finished, we have drafted a bill to protect the rights of bondholders.

"It proposes to safeguard investments of four million unfortunate bondholders and one-half million property owners, approximating $10,000,000,000."

Killer Dies in Gas Chamber

Canon City, Col., June 22 With a smile on his lips, Leonard Delongis, 25-year-old Wisconsin murderer, went to his death in the gas chamber of the state prison here. He was convicted of killing Albert Oesterich, Weld County rancher.

He had been in the death house since March 7, but at no time did his impending fate appear to affect him. He was always happy and was known as "the merry man of the death house.'

As he walked up the hill back of the prison where the gas chamber is situated, he talked easily and cheerfully to Warden Roy Best.

At his request, his body probably will be given to the State Medical school.

PERFECT SUN TAN AND HOW YOU MAY GET IT

FREEST BEAUTY AID POSSIBLE IN BACKYARD

Hollywood, June 22—Old Sol is truly a god during the summer months.

Most of us poor mortals prostrate ourselves at his feet, figuratively and try to outdo each other at the interesting art of acquiring a perfect tan.

So I decided to search for the most perfect exponent of this cult of sun worshipers and hear a bit about how one should go about it.

My path, of course, led to Joan Crawford who, each season, acquires the most heavenly shade of golden tan, like a bronze goddess, making all feminine eyes that fall upon her green with envy.

Joan is a true sun worshipper who lies in its rays of both beauty and energy.

"In my profession," Joan says, "energy is the first requisite. No matter how determined or imaginative we may be we're lost without it. That's chiefly why I devote so many hours to the sun."

So her reasons are her desire for energy, which is later translated to dramatic performances before the camera, a natural love of sunshine and the fact that it is nature's freest beauty aid.

As to how she does it—

"Its very simple," she smiled, seated in her portable white dressing room on the set of her current picture. "I begin early in the year.

"The first day I stay only fifteen minutes—five minutes each for front, back and sides. From there I build up progressively to sessions of four and five hours."

This is important.

Too much sun at one time to start with may, as well as giving an uncomfortable burn, make one violently sick. Too many rich vitamins all at once.

So Joan, on the second day stays 20 minutes, 30 the next, and for the rest of that week.

The second week starts off with 45 minutes and by the end of the week a 90-minute stretch is comfortable.

Eleven o'clock in the morning is the best hour. The sun is hottest and the rays most potent.

Joan's formula for the oils with which she always rubs her body before settling down is simple, too.

The first week she uses pure petrolatum, to protect the skin from the first burn. From the second week on it's "French dressing"—half vinegar and half olive oil, well shaken together. This last mixture is what makes the nice golden tan.

Joan does all her sunbathing in her own back yard in a roofless canvas tent, and in mid-summer she jumps in her pool for a swim between each "turn over."

And this nice even tan takes the place of greenpaint for picture purposes so all through the summer she wears no make-up but lipstick and mascara.

SCORES ASK PENSION FACTS OF BOSTON AMERICAN

By the Pension Editor, Boston Evening American

Am I eligible for an old age pension?
Where can I apply for such a pension?

These and many similar questions deluged the Boston Evening American pension editor today.

Hundreds of letters are streaming in from every corner of New England.

Scores of the inquirers want to know where they can apply for the pension.

As yet there is no federal machinery for the operation of the social-security, or pension, bill.

NOT SIGNED

The act has been passed by both branches of Congress, but it must be signed by President Roosevelt to become law.

The present old age assistance law in Massachusetts must be revised to conform with the federal act.

Distribution of pension money will then be made by the present state bureau, Ford Building, Ashburton place, Boston. Director Francis Bardwell has announced.

Many correspondents ask only for general information on the pensions. The pension editor can only answer specific questions.

If you are in doubt as to your eligibility, as to requirements, etc., write to the Boston Evening American pension editor.

ANSWERS TODAY

Answers to representative questions in today's mail follow:

Q—I am 77 years old and live with a daughter. Am I eligible for the pension?

A—Yes. The age requirement under the social-security act is 65 or over.

Q—I earn just enough for board. I am over 65 years old and have lived in Massachusetts since 1905. What do I have to do to get the pension? J. A., of Wellesley.

A—When the Massachusetts Legislature recodifies the present state law to conform with the national act (which must yet be signed by the President) you should apply to the Old-Age Assistance Bureau, Ford Building, Ashburton place, Boston.

Q—I am receiving $6.00 weekly old-age assistance from the State. Will I receive $5 more a week from the Federal government under the new act?

Y. M., of Lynn.

CAN OWN PETS

A—No. The national government will match dollar for dollar given by the State only up to $15. If the new Massachusetts law (to be passed soon) does not change your weekly allowance, you will receive $15 more a month.

Q—May a pension recipient own a dog or cat? E. B., of Boston.

A—That is all right.

Q—My husband and I are each 64 years old. We have both lived over 9 years in this State. Are we eligible?

A—You both have fulfilled the residence requirements, i. e., one year residence in the State before application for pension, and at least five years out of nine years preceding. But you must reach the age of 65.

State Senator Pierce Dead

State Senator Alfred Pierce, 59, died today at his summer home at Westgate, Danvers Highlands.

He had been ill for a short time. The immediate cause of his death was a heart ailment.

Senator from the 2nd Essex district, he was elected in 1934 for his first term.

He was former postmaster of Salem, 1923-1934, and was on the old Salem Common Council in 1908 to 1910.

He had also been State Representative from Ward 6.

His winter home was 195 North street, Salem.

Surviving are his wife, Mary Harris Pierce, and his mother.

The death of Senator Pierce further reduced the slim Republican majority in the Senate. For the remainder of the session the line-up will be 20 Republicans and 19 Democrats.

As his district is normally Republican, the G. O. P. expects to regain the seat in a special election in the fall.

The story he told of killing Mildred Sunday night left detectives aghast.

School Boy's Flight Vain, He Passes!

Remember that sinking feeling when the teacher began to read on the last day of school the list of the pupils who had been promoted?

The awful suspense as you wondered if your name was going to be among them?

Well, 11-year-old John Sheehan, of Putnam road, Revere, departing yesterday for school, couldn't bring himself to face the ordeal, especially as he had reasons to feel a bit doubtful about that promotion.

When he failed to appear at school or to return home last night, Revere police were asked to search for him.

Today, however, a sheepish and bedraggled John returned home after a night spent at Revere Beach. He discovered his flight had been useless. He had been promoted after all.

would be effective even while an appeal is pending.

He indicated that he did not intend to issue an interim injunction.

Whether the town of Dighton will find other means of stopping the dog races while the appeal is pending remains to be seen.

At least it appeared certain that the Bristol County Kennel Club, Inc., which held its races last night after Judge Donnelly's decision was made, would hold races again tonight.

And it appears reasonably certain that there will be dog racing nightly, except Sundays, for some time at the Taunton-Dighton track.

APPEAL READY

Judge Donnelly was found in Worcester, where he lives, and queried about the confusing situation while Dighton town lawyers were drawing up a formal decree to present him to sign, in accordance with his injunction decision.

At the same time Professor Frank L. Simpson of B. U. Law School, counsel for the dog track organization, was ready to file an appeal immediately that the injunction is signed.

TRAIL PUZZLE FOR SCHARTON

William R. Scharton, defense counsel for the Rettich gang, today was trying to figure out where the trail U. S. Attorney Francis J. W. Ford outlined for the jury will lead.

That the federal trial of eight defendants charged with the $129,00 mail robbery in Fall River will take a sensational turn was evident from the tour.

Attorney Ford led the jurors, Judge Hugh D. McLellan, and five of the defendants besides Attorney Scharton, through Fall River.

He was forbidden by law to tell them what use he would make of the things and places he brought to their attention.

But, there was a sign saying "Peter's Permanent Wave." He asked them to pay particular attention to that.

There was a polished plate glass window in a clothing store near the post office. He asked each juror in turn to look into the window at an angle which gave a reflected view of the loading platform of the post office.

The Oak Grove Cemetery was particularly brought to the attention of the jurors, with special emphasis on the walls themselves, and the gateway leading into it.

REV. COUGHLIN ACCUSED BY CANONIST

By Associated Press

New York, June 22—The Rev. Edward V. Dargin, canonist for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, and an authority on church laws, charges in the July issue of the Ecclesiastical Review that Father Charles E. Coughlin violated canon law in his political utterances and in the organization of his National Union for Social Justice.

Father Durgin says in the article that Bishop Michael J. Gallagher of Detroit has "the right and duty to forbid" political activity by ecclesiastics and that Father Coughlin "can and should be punished" for disobeying.

The Rev. Fr. Dargin is pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Croton Falls, N. Y. He holds the degree of doctor of juris canonici and is defender of the marriage bond of the archdiocese.

His duties as the latter have been compared to those of an attorney-general.

"It is the opinion of this writer," Father Dargin writes, "that the activities of Father Coughlin constitute direct violation of canon law. Whether his activities are or are not political is a question of fact.

"It is my conviction that they are political, and this conviction is based on his organization of a nation-wide league, with a direct or open threat to use the voting power for or against certain national policies, laws and elective officials.

CANONICAL LAW CITED

"The direct law governing this matter is contained in Tit. 83 of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore.

"This legislation expressly commands priests to abstain from public discussion of political or secular matters, either in or outside of the church, and forbids clerics to inject themselves in judgments of the faithful in questions of the latter kind."

Father Dargin said that canonical law empowers Father Coughlin's bishop with "the right and duty to forbid, by precept, political activity of ecclesiastics."

He added that offending priests "can and should be punished—according to the sacred canons."

The Code of Canon Law Book "frequently in recent utterances has warned the clergy of various countries against political activity."

Fr. Coughlin Defended By His Bishop's Organ

By International News Service

Detroit, June 22—The Rev. Edward V. Dargin's charge in the Ecclesiastical Review that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin had violated church law drew a sharp editorial retort today from the Michigan Catholic, weekly newspaper.

It is the official organ of Bishop Michael J. Gallagher of Detroit, patron of the Royal Oak radio priest.

The editorial criticized the Review for "sensational tactics," referred to Father Dargin as "a hitherto unknown cleric," and said:

"Attacking Father Coughlin has become a favorite method of attaining publicity . . . Little literary gliders are trying to hitch-hike on the giant airplane of Father Coughlin's personality."

2 Die, 1 Hurt in Crash

South Easton, June 22—Two men were killed and another suffered injuries which may yet cause death when their truck left the road and struck a tree today.

So terrific was the impact the tree was uprooted. The truck tipped over, pinning Dolan and Parsons. Medical Examiner Atwood said they died instantly.

McEain, riding on the rear of the truck, was thrown onto the soft earth of the field and escaped without a scratch.

Nemeskal was taken to Brockton hospital. His name is on the danger list.

Law's Mercy Forced on Her

Mrs. Margaret Waley's tearful pleas in Federal Court in Tacoma today that she wished to plead guilty to the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping were brushed aside. U. S. Roosevelt Tax Plan Just Like Britain's

London, June 22—The London Times said editorially today President Roosevelt through his tax plan counteracted a host of "fantastic" movement headed by Huey Long, Father Coughlin and others.

"It is clear he is adroitly and effectively reasserting his leadership," the paper said.

"To the British mind," said the Telegraph, "there is little that is revolutionary about Mr. Roosevelt's proposals to Congress . . ."

"They merely follow in the footsteps of a succession of British chancellors of the exchequer who have made these forms of taxation familiar to this country."

LONG TO BACK PRESIDENT—IF

By International News Service

Washington, June 22—In a dramatic move, Senator Huey P. Long today offered to support President Roosevelt for re-election if the latter will help write the Long "Share-the-Wealth" plan into law.

The Louisiana senator explained his attitude toward Roosevelt's tax message in an open letter to the President which was read in the Senate as he launched a speech.

KIDNAP WIFE'S PLEA SPURNED, TO BE TRIED

By Associated Press

Tacoma, Wash., June 22—Despite Mrs. Margaret Waley's insistence that she be permitted to plead guilty to the "Lindbergh law" kidnaping of George Weyerhaeuser, Federal Judge E. E. Cushman today ones more refused to accept her plea and directed the entry of a formal "not guilty" plea.

He immediately appointed John F. Dore, former Seattle mayor, as her trial attorney.

Judge Cushman then set next Monday for fixing the trial date.

The 19-year-old wife of Harmon M. Waley, who yesterday was sentenced to 45 years on a guilty plea, began weeping and whispering to Owen F. Hughes, Assistant United States Attorney.

WANTS NO TRIAL

Hughes informed the court the girl wished to make a statement. Judge Cushman ruled she could speak only through Stephen J. O'Brien, appointed to represent Dore.

O'Brien explained to the court that Mrs. Waley did not want to stand trial, but that he felt it was his duty to have her tried in her own best interests.

Judge Cushman assured O'Brien:

"You are doing your full duty as I understand it."

O'Brien previously had told the court that after talking with Mrs. Waley nearly an hour this morning and studying the indictment "in my opinion she could not be convicted if she went to trial."

DOMINATED BY HUSBAND

"I have found nothing that could convict her," he said. "I think a trial would be the best thing, after talking with her husband.

"She was completely dominated by him and knew nothing of the kidnaping until two days after the boy was kidnaped, when she heard him in the car."

Judge Cushman asked O'Brien if he had considered entering a plea of nolle contenders (refusing to plead guilty or not guilty) and merely standing mute when arraigned.

O'Brien said he had, but added:

"I believe it is best to go to trial."

Mrs. Waley had come into court, eyes red and puffed from weeping. When O'Brien assured the court she insisted on pleading guilty, despite his and her relatives' advice, she gripped the arms of her chair and burst into tears.

V. F. W. CHEER CURLEY OATH FOE ATTACK

New Bedford, June 22—Governor Curley, principal orator at the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention here today, was cheered for more than half an hour after completing a bitter attack on educators who oppose the oath of allegiance.

More than 2500 veterans had gathered in the New Bedford Hotel to hear the governor's address.

He said:

"I don't find myself reconciled with their theories and doctrines after reading the reports of commencement exercises of many of our colleges.

"I sometimes question the entire value of education.

"It is inconceivable that presidents of universities question the ethics of an oath of allegiance to their country.

"Thousands of persons are walking the streets idle while professors in colleges, who should be trying to find a solution to end the depression, devote their time to arguments over taking the oath of allegiance to their country."

"KIDNAP BOYS" REAL PROBLEM

By International News Service

Jasper, Ind., June 22—Two swashbuckling West Virginia boys who drew life sentences while trying to emulate John Dillinger reposed in the Dubois county jail today while the legal profession sought a solution for their problem.

The plight of Bascum Ray, Jr., 14, and Maurice Bowling, 17, of Huntington, W. Va., who face life sentences for kidnaping Sheriff Edwin Lengers, of Dubois county, has revealed a series of conflicting provisions in Indiana criminal law, attorneys said.

Superintendent A. F. Miles of the Indiana reformatory at Pendleton declined to accept custody of the boys.

Learning of this, Judge John L. Sumner, of Jasper, who imposed the life sentences, telephoned Attorney General Philip Lutz, for advice.

Sheriff Luegers then brought the boys back to the Dubois county jail.

O'CONNELL BAIL Rejected by Foley

Bail offered today for Arthur J. O'Connell, who is to get a new trial on a charge of attacking a Roxbury girl, was rejected.

Indications were he would have to remain at Charles street jail over the week-end.

His attorney, Martin L. Gouldey, offered as security property valued at $4800.

Gouldey said District Attorney Foley has a rule property offered as bail must amount to at least $5000.

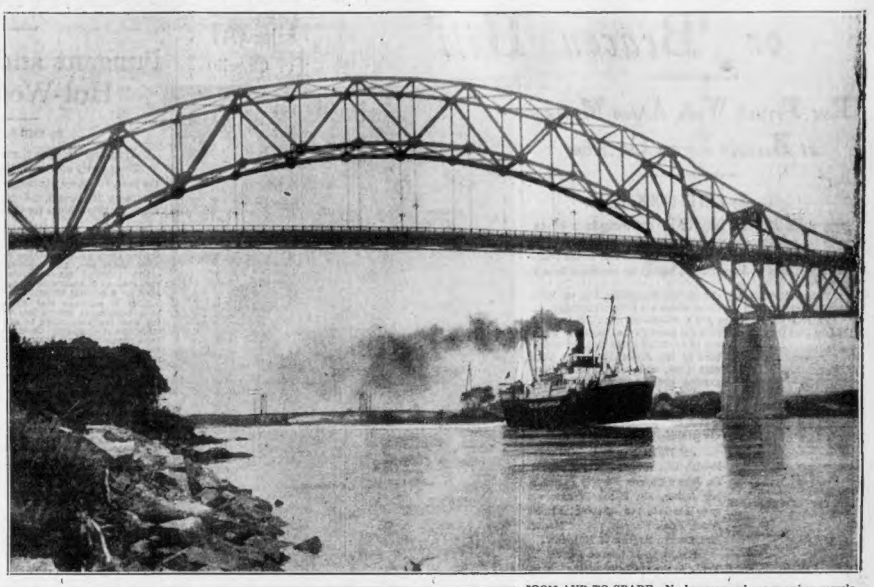
"MOST BEAUTIFUL!"—The bridge, in this instance, is the title winner! It's the graceful new span across the Cape Cod Canal at Bourne. By vote of a national committee of judges, it is most artistic such structure of the year. Admiring the view from a rail of the lofty arch are Florence Christopulos, Mary McNamara, Henrietta Philbrick, Natalie Meier and Elizabeth Christopulos.



ROOM AND TO SPARE—No longer need ocean-going vessels wait for the lifting of draw bridges when they avail themselves of a short-cut via the Cape Cod Canal. Thanks to Uncle Sam's engineers—and Uncle Sam's cash—this splendid new span at Bourne and another at Sagamore are open to the public today. Both clear the water at high tide by 135 feet.

MASTERPIECE IN STEEL—Science has its own art—and no less breathtaking in its beauty than the canvas of a master painter is the symmetry of this great bridge, wrought in steel under U. S. BETTY ALDEN

Rue French Weds Alden Megrew at Beverly Farms Ceremony

By BETTY ALDEN

THE MONTH OF JUNE is drawing to a close and there is standing room only, as the droves of lads and lassies, who wish to be married in the traditional wedding month, besiege the marriage license bureaus . . .

Today almost every church has its wedding, but we have space to mention only the three which are important socially . . .

These three weddings are a coincident trio . . . outside of the fact that they all occur on the same day, all are taking place out of town, all three brides are members of the Junior League and Vincent Club, and each of their bridegrooms are Harvard graduates and members of the Hasty Pudding and other exclusive clubs . . .

RUE E. FRENCH

Megrew Takes Bride

AT HIGH NOON Rue Elizabeth French was escorted to the altar of St. John's Church, Beverly Farms, by her father, Mr. Hollis French, who gave her into the keeping of Mr. Alden Frick Megrew, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Megrew of Milton . . .

Rue, who is one of the shining lights in the operation of the business affairs of the Junior League, wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin trimmed with duchess lace and carried lilies of the valley and gardenias . . . Her veil was caught to a coronet of orange blossoms . . .

Miss Beatrice V. Abbott of New York came over to be honor maid on Rue's wedding day . . . She wore a frock of white lace with a blue taffeta sash and blue slippers and carried an arm bouquet of spring garden flowers . . .

Wedding Feast at Annisquam Bay

THE BRIDESMAIDS were all gowned alike in white lace with yellow slippers and sashes and wide brimmed leghorn hats . . .

In the group were Jane S. Megrew, sister of the bridegroom, Marion T. Little, Mary Elizabeth Lowe and Elizabeth Read of Villa Nova, Pa. . . .

Mr. Dyson Duncan of New York was the best man and the ushers corps included the Messrs. David C. Crockett and William A. Shurcliff of Boston, Stephen Duggan, Jr., and W. Wallace Ryan of New York, Arthur B. Emmons, III, Thomas Whiteside of Dover, Alden French of Springfield, Hollis French of Southborough, Stanley French of Weston and George W. Movius of Boston . . .

The summer home of Mr. and Mrs. French on Annisquam Bay was the scene of the wedding breakfast which was attended only by the immediate families and a few friends . . . The newlyweds will make their home in Appleton, Wisconsin after September 15 . . .

Evelyn Thayer Walks to Altar

ALSO WEARING WHITE FROCKS are the bridesmaids who are preceding Evelyn Thayer down the aisle of the First Church of Christ, Lancaster, of which her great-great-grandfather, Nathaniel Thayer, was once the rector . . .

Gazed at and admired by an assemblage of all of the distinguished Thayer and Warren clans of Boston and hereabouts, the fragile, blonde bride, resplendent in satin and laces, gives her heart and hand to Lewis Cass Ledyard, 3rd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis C. Ledyard, Jr., of New York . . .

Old family lace fashions her veil, which clings to her coiffure by a wreath of orange blossoms . . . Her gown is very simple, with a long sweeping train . . . and a row of tiny buttons down the back and at the tight wrists.

The bridesmaids in white shirred chiffon frocks with tiny chiffon capes and large white stitched organdie hats rely for their color contrast in their apple green sashes and slippers . . . They are carrying white snapdragon . . .

Sisters Included Among Attendants

MRS. WARREN THAYER the bride's mother, is wearing a navy blue and white flowered chiffon frock with a large navy blue hat . . .

Mrs. Charles Emlen Channing (Katherine Thayer) and Sylvia Thayer, both sisters of the bride, are included among her attendants as are Nancy Shaw and Katherine Winthrop . . .

Robert Grant, 3rd, of New York, is the best man and the ushers include such prominent young men as Malcolm Stewart, Robert Stewart, Arthur Dupee, all of Boston; Parmely Webb Herrick Jr., David Tiffany, James Weeks, Herman Kinnicutt, Philip Boyer, Allston Boyer, all of New York, and Hugh Johnston of Chicago . . .

Dorothea Newman Weds in Concord

AT "TIPTREE," THE CONCORD home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Eaton, there is much celebrating and toasting going on this afternoon in honor of the marriage of Mrs. Eaton's daughter, Dorothea Newman, to Theodore Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Chase of Concord . . .

For her wedding Dorothea has chosen a gown of traditional white satin with a De Medici collar of old family lace . . . Turquoise blue and peach organdie with leghorn hats banded in peach and turquoise and large bouquets of Token roses and African daisies fashion the costumes of the large bevy of bridesmaids, all prominent younger members of the social world . . .

For the wedding and reception of her daughter Mrs. Eaton has chosen to wear a gown of larkspur blue chiffon with a corsage of orchids and Mrs. Chase's chiffon gown of pearl gray is trimmed with gray lace . . .

Among the prominent out of town guests invited to the First Parish Meeting House in Concord to witness the nuptials are Mrs. Henry Russell Platt of Chicago and her daughter, Countess Bobrinskay; Mr. and Mrs. Acosta Nichols of Oyster Bay, L. I., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eaton of New Canaan, Ct., and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elliott of New York . . .

FUTURE Debutante Sales Girl For Charity

A FUTURE DEBUTANTE SMILES at the camera man as she learns what fun it is to be all dressed up and sell things for charity just as her mother, Mrs. E. Prescott Cumner, does. Little Miss Mary is seven years old.

Madeleine Erhard Weds in Dedham

FIVE days after Miss Madeleine Leonie Erhard made her debut to society, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emile Henri Erhard of Village avenue, Dedham, announced her engagement to Mr. Richard Cranch Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gordon Scott of Portland, Oregon.

That was three years ago this month, three years which have given Richard time to graduate from Harvard and to become established in business.

This afternoon, at the end of three weeks of parties and entertainment Miss Erhard became the bride of Mr. Scott. Tall cedars about each pillar and bunches of pink peonies and blue larkspur at the end of each pew brightened the interior of St. Mary's Church, Dedham, for the ceremony.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown, an Empire dress of ivory satin with a bodice of old rose point lace. The lace fell from her shoulders to form a long train and the sleeves were embroidered with seed pearls.

Her veil which was caught into her tulle cap by a small cluster of orange blossoms, was her grandmother's wedding veil, and had a wide hem interlaced with silver threads. She carried a bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ellen Bottomley as maid of honor was very lovely in a pink mousseline de soie frock with a leghorn hat with a pink velvet band across the top forming a bow in front, and carrying an armful of blue delphinium and pink stock.

The six bridesmaids wore similar costumes of blue with pink flowers predominating in their bouquets. They were Barbara Batchelder, Penelope Warren, Leslie Blake, Eleanor Leith, Elizabeth Philbrook and Rosamond Emerson.

The wedding reception is being held at the Dedham Polo and Country Club, after which the bridal couple will leave on a motor trip across the continent to Los Angeles where they will be established for the next five years.

Colognes That Are Fresh as Dew

Pungent and Exhilarating Hot-Weather Aids

By THE BEAUTY EDITOR

THE BIG THING these days is to look cool.

Being lovely and enchanting is important—straight through the year, but, come summer, with the asphalt rising in grotesque humps on city streets, the only things we want to hear about is fresh, fragrant things for the bath.

In the days when sidewalks were placed to fry eggs on and long before anyone thought of serving them there (we have in mind these gay, new open-air cafes) cologne was something you used in a sick-room or applied for a nervous headache.

It is in colognes that there have been more innovations in the past few years than in any other line of cosmetics. Colognes have pyramided from their humble beginnings to glamorous, present-day necessities. They are now used for nearly every purpose for which a perfume or toilet water is used.

To the multitude of city dwellers who rely on perfumed colognes to take the "wilt" out of hot weather, here is glad news. Three of the most famous perfumes in the world are now being released in eau de cologne form.

These dew-fresh body triumphs come in a tri-flacon presentation that look as cool as ice sitting around your bathroom, on your beauty bar, or tucked away in an overnight case.

Any one of these three colognes (their price is the same as one) is divine for a rubdown after the bath or for spraying over yourself, lingerie, clothes and all. We even know of someone who sprinkles it about the room to freshen and sweeten the air. A few drops will do wonders in removing stuffiness and tobacco odors.

To learn the names of these three colognes, which come in a tri-flacon case, call Juliet Sheiby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

Question—I am writing to ask your advice and hope that you will be able to help me. Although only twenty, my hair has fallen rapidly and is now quite thin. Is there anything that will grow hair? Does short hair cuts help? Is there anything that will stop it from falling. I will watch your column for an answer.

"Dan," Milford

Answer—Persons who are anemic, or have "shot" nerves, or some bodily disorder, are apt to have dry, lifeless hair. It is often brittle and harsh and naturally falls out. Hot oil shampoos, and light massage every day with the finger tips, together with an application of a rich, nourishing scalp food, will help. In very severe cases of falling hair, and excessive dryness of the scalp, consult a scalp specialist or your family physician. There is an excellent hormone scalp ointment on the market which prevents excessive falling hair. It also arrests premature grayness. Embodied in this ointment are hormones, considered by many to be the very life force of skin youth and health. Trade names cannot be mentioned here, but if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed evelope I will be glad to give you the name of this scalp food.

Form FOR LUNCHEON Invitation

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Please send me a form I can use for a luncheon invitation. It is to be a graduation luncheon in honor of my sister, and as I do not know all of the ladies I am going to invite, I do not know how to word the invitation. 2—Is this letter paper all right for the invitation?

M.

1—The form of invitation to those guests whom you do not know might be:

Dear Miss Graham:

I am inviting a few of my sister Mary's friends to a luncheon I am giving in honor of her graduation and it would make her and me very happy if you come. It is to be at our home on Friday, the first of July, at 1 o'clock.

Do tell us that you will be able to be with us. My sister has told me such delightful things about you that I am looking forward to meeting you and to have you with us at the luncheon would give my sister, too, special pleasure.

Cordially yours,

The notes of invitation to those guests whom you do know would be, of course, more intimately worded. But it would still be best form to send all invitations as notes.

2. Yes, the letter-paper on which you wrote to me would be appropriate for these notes.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

If a relative of the family is married, and has just the parents of both sides at the ceremony, is it necessary for the other relatives of the family (those not invited) to send gifts? Is it proper to send a wedding gift in any case similar, where, for instance, the couple are married without inviting their friends or relatives?

R.

In cases like this, when no invitations are sent, relatives and friends of the couple send presents if they wish. And it is very natural for them to wish to send gifts for the new home.

Oil FOR THE Lamps of China

By ALICE TISDALE HOBART

Hester Fights Plague

CHAPTER 51

(This is a serialization of the Cosmopolitan production released by Warner Bros.)

"What would you consider a business that would warrant it?" asked Stephen.

The general manager named a figure that made him draw in his breath.

After Truesdale had gone, Stephen began planning. If Hester was to have this separate dwelling, he'd have to touch that figure within the year.

He gathered himself together for the effort.

Now, early in the morning, he went to his office in order that before the steady hum of big business began, and he was surrounded with the substantial success he was bringing to the oil business, he might imagine more and more fully how a man living ever on the edge of starvation could be taught to want light.

Often in the days that followed, thinking so much of poverty, he imagined his own life forced down into its dark and hampered mold. He never got ahead in his savings.

He had thought he could put by the amount of his increase, but the expenses of the house had gone up enormously. How did Kin manage it and never get caught?

No Time to Watch

He had no time to watch him, it was all he could do to follow the squeeze going on among the men in the business.

He might dismiss Kin, but he might be worse off in another house-boy's hands. Kin doesn't take more than my increase, he thought, but I suppose he takes that.

And Hester—Hester believes we should spend the increase. Saving is ugly to Hester. Then there's mother—exchange bad for me. . Silver changes into so little gold.

He began to wonder if perhaps the secret of saving, as in profit by squeeze, did not lie in the little things.

Kin took away his increase by a few coppers here and a few coppers there—a slow but persistent seepage. If he were as persistent in the small savings, perhaps he could get ahead. Begin on himself.

He didn't seem to have many wants but still—club chats, smokes, clothes—didn't bother much about clothes, but might save a little there. He must. He must make Hester safe against poverty.

With the stirrings of spring came the stirrings of soldiers awakening from their winter torpidity, and in the districts where there had been famine, bandit groups sprang up.

Comes Summer

Then summer came. In this ancient civilization the summers were terrible. From the city the odors, mingling in the narrow streets and never quite blown away, rose, filling the hong like a noisome perfume, and the still heat lay in the rooms like a hot fire.

The house seemed very empty. Two of the younger men were away on their vacations. Elsie and Dee-dee had long since gone to the hills, and Burnham had joined them recently when news had come that Dee-dee was not well.

Hester and Stephen were making ready to go, too, leaving Fenton and the new boy, Lunt, to carry on, when the evil spirit of cholera entered the city.

Stephen would not go now, leaving the younger, inexperienced men in the midst of danger. This was his post. And Hester understood his anxiety as she had never understood his anxiety over famine.

There was something tangible in this threat of death which roused her. The inactivity of the past year fell from her, a discarded garment.

She ministered to all around her, quieting the fears of both yellow man and white. Through kitchen and servants' quarters, she moved like a white spirit, for the moist heat had taken her last vestige of color.

Like children, the servants came to her, shaken with the fear that the black death would snatch away their lives, and she calmed them.

"If you do as I say, I can keep you late. The evil spirit enters into the melons, into all cold things. Eat only the hot food, and the evil spirit cannot touch you. And bathe your hands in this special water when you come from the street."

Tirelessly she worked, even entering the offices and superintending the baking of some papers handled by a victim of the dread disease.

Scourge Goes By

Three times a day Stephen, Fenton and Lunt gathered around her, eating only what she gave them. The red glare of the charcoal in the brazier upon which Kin cooked all their food, there in her presence threw its heat up in shimmering waves, fanning her cheeks with its hot breath, but she never relinquished her oversight.

Round the slender figure of Hester these men pivoted. Lunt, straight out from home, was frankly her slave.

And Fenton, like a little boy who, once the veneer of braggadocio is gone, clings without shame to his elders, frankly took his courage from Hester.

"So long as you're not afraid, I'm not," he told them. "But say, couldn't I call you Hester? You'd seem a little nearer to me then."

From the men the other hongs dropped in casually at mealtime, hoping Hester would ask them to stay. And she always did.

The mission doctor, pressed as he was, came often, making as his excuse the need to look after them; he took strength from the presence of this woman so full of courage, but he scolded her for risking herself thus. She ought to leave the city.

Stephen himself said little, but in Hester's presence he kept his eyes always upon her, as if thus he gained strength to forget the horror of the death, repeated so often around him, so needless if the people were not so ignorant.

And the threat of war that hung over the city, that troubled him, too. Disease, war, more poverty. A haven from it all was Hester. He felt healed by a lovely compassion in her.

The city pressed closer with its hundreds of dying men. Coffins could not be made fast enough.

Shrouded in bright red the people bore the biers down to the junks on the river, some taking their dead to ancestral burying grounds under ancient cypress trees, others carrying them over the narrow green dikes between the now golden rice fields up into the hills to other ancestral burying places.

Across the bund, night and day, the red-decked coffins and the white-clad mourners moved. From every window of the hong the pageant of color could be seen and all the rooms were filled with the wailing, shrieking dirges.

But as day after day the scourge passed them by, Hester grew in her belief in the white man's immunity, the immunity science had brought him.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

Husbands Need Not Be Handsome

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A GIRL correspondent of mine, who signs herself "Romantic," is amazed and bewildered because she finds herself falling in love with a youth who is, she says, totally lacking in good looks.

Can her love, she wonders, be the real thing?

Or ought she to send the unhandsome boy friend about his business and wait until her girlhood dreams come true—dreams that centered, of course, about some curly-pated, straight-nosed, strong-chinned Adonis, tall, lean muscular and graceful?

"Is it really possible," she asks, "to be in love, and to stay in love, with a man who is small, ugly and insignificant looking? Suppose I married him and afterwards found the perfect prince? I'm in terror of doing the wrong thing. And yet, George is such a dear and so terribly sweet to me! We have the most absolutely swell times together. A girl couldn't have a more wonderful lover. I suppose my heart is already out of my control. Shall I be making a terrible mistake?"

LISTEN TO HEART

It must be that "Romantic" is unduly worried by the possible comments of outsiders. So far as she herself is concerned, she will sooner or later realize that the person—man or woman —who is the object of a genuine love, no longer looks ugly to the one who loves.

For, fortunately, love is not dependent on beauty. And it is possible, as we know it is, for a woman without a trace of prettiness to have a happy life, rich in love, this is even truer in the case of a plain-looking man.

A girl who falls in love with an ugly man, whom otherwise she admired, has nothing to fear or to regret, so far as I can see.

In fact, there are plenty of old wives' tales to the effect that too pronounced good looks on a man's part, have often been disruptive of happy marriage. A good, safe, dependable year-in-and-year-out husband, they will tell you, guaranteed to wear a lifetime, but no need whatever of being handsome. A nice, plain, neutral, unnoticeable looking man is, they say, not only a good foil for a pretty wife, but unlikely to be pursued by other women.

PRACTICAL ADVANTAGE

Some girls, less idealistic than the writer of the letter I have quoted, discover for themselves the practical advantages of being better-looking than their husbands. One young friend of mine was for years impatient for her husband to develop business, so that other women might find him less attractive.

But "Romantic" is of a different type. She knows she can love deeply. She wants nothing less than the biggest and most beautiful love of which she is capable. She wants a real marriage, with profound devotion on both sides, and she wants it to last.

But before she makes the final surrender, she merely wishes to make sure that the role of lover in her life drama can be just as satisfactorily played by a plain-featured George as by the most expensive product of Hollywood.

I hope I have reassured her. And I send my blessing.

GET ANOTHER GIRL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We were 20 and 18 when we started going together several years ago. When I was 23, the prospects of marriage made the whole world a rainbow. Along comes the depression; I lost my job, and we deferred our marriage. We used to tramp the street evenings, gazing at the shop windows, at things we had no money to buy. Then she broke with me, saying she'd have to think of her future.

Now she's engaged to a greasy old widower, fifteen years older than she is. He has false teeth and he's flashily dressed. He owns several stores and calls himself a chain-store magnate.

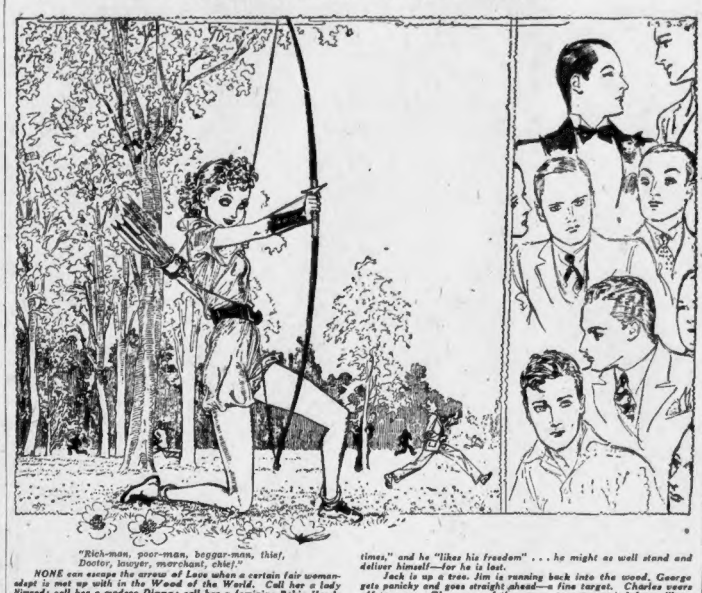
I met her on the street the other day, and she cried over me, said she worried about me all the time, and that she was desperately unhappy. I was feeling pretty nasty and said: "Save your tears; you'll need them for yourself, worse than me, later on." Then I bowed and turned on my heel. Was I unfriendly rude? DESERTED.

Well, you weren't polite, but who could blame you for feeling the way you did about the girl? She weeps over you in the public streets, tells you she worries about you all the time, and yet is going to marry a man you describe as repulsive.

When I beg you to find yourself another girl, the advice is not only in the hope this may prove a counter-irritant, but that you will not be free to come at the young lady's beck and call, after she marries her widower.

Girls of this type never want to be quit of the old love. And here's hoping the old love doesn't play second fiddle.

Better Than Robin Hood



"Rich-man, poor-man, beggar-man, thief, Doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief!"

NONE can escape the arrow of Love when a certain fair woman-adept is met up with in the Wood of the World. Call her a lady Nimrod; call her a modern Diana; call her a feminine Robin Hood; call her the undying Eros in feminine guise. But she is nothing but the RIGHT GIRL, made a mighty huntress by the best archer of them all—Cupid.

And when Rich-man, Poor-man sees her and flees, automatically, from Love and Marriage, with this and that excuse . . . such as "the times," and he "likes his freedom" . . . he might as well stand and deliver himself—for he is lost.

Jack is up a tree. Jim is running back into the wood. George gets panicky and goes straight ahead—a fine target. Charles veers off to cover. They name it "the human mean to get married for a "long time yet!" But the Lady Robin Hoods laugh, for they know that every man stumbles under the arrow of love sometimes. The Pessimist, the Greek, the Small, the Cynical, each has a love-story tucked away in his life. And before the face of LOVE the Great one is as simple and foolish as the Small one. —NELL BRINKLEY.

When CHILDREN ARE "Bad"

By LISA GRENELLE

HOW often do you use that convenient phrase of "you bad boy!" or "you bad girl!"?

And for what cause?

Is it because Jimmy is clumsy, always spilling and breaking things? Or because Janie is stubborn, always making such a fuss over everything? If so, you are not using a wise course. For children are not bad when they are merely annoying, aggravating though their conduct may be.

Many devoted parents find so little to praise in their children. Often they consider praise bad for them. Others also find so much for which to blame them. This brings a child to think of himself as "bad," and possessing few redeeming features than others. He feels always in the wrong, and this habit of mind remains with him, no matter what he may achieve.

I often meet men and women with this sense of guilt. They feel that no matter how fine their record is, or in what high regard they are held by their contemporaries, they are somehow in the wrong.

These people are not queer, nor can they ever quite conquer that feeling of guilt. As for the cause, it is very simple and easy to explain.

Jimmie, in a fit of rage, says he hates his father. His mother tells him he is a bad boy to feel that way. This Jimmie believes, because his mother is so certain of it.

You cannot ease a child's fear by telling him not to be afraid. And he cannot argue himself out of it. You can control your child's actions, and even his expression of emotion. He also has it in his power to control his activity and hide his feelings. But neither you nor he can alter the feeling itself, unless you remove the cause of it.

MATCH YOUR FROCK TO SWEETHEART'S SHIRT

Same Fabric and Tailoring

By ANNICE BRINK
Fashion Editor

THE MASCULINE element will have to organize a crime squad soon, else we womenfolk will appropriate every fashion idea they could ever call their own.

Pillage from the newest raid into their territory is the shirtwaist frock made by machines and tailors and designers who, until six months ago, stitched, cut and created fine shirts.

Not that they've stopped making shirts. Simply, they've added those magnificently cut and executed shirtwaist frocks—it all being the idea of one Jade Ellis, another of the smart young New York crowd. And now a Boston shop stocks them, at prices ranging from $5 to $10!

Probably you've never realized that machines in a men's shirt factory are equipped to do marvels of fine stitching, surpassing the feminine stitchers of fine seams who were at their best in the Alcott age. These feminine-lined versions have shirt bosom shapes using cross-wise stripes, ripple bosoms that need no ironing, box pleating and such.

Shirtsleeves are set in manfashion, with ample swing and swagger.

Shirt collars are fitted neatly and crisply as a man's, tied with navy, brown, red or green rat-catcher ties, depending on the color of the frock, and the collars may be worn open if the weather sizzles.

Shirt yokes and action backs are adapted to women's figures.

And, saving the best for the last, you should see the fabrics! If you've a yen for dressing up to the current young man's sartorial achievements, here is your opportunity to do a grown-up brother and sister act, for materials are off the same bolts. Checked, shadow-striped, wide and narrow, lovely shades of blue, orchid, garnet, green, pink, peach and gray, imported broadcloth shirtings, brushed cottons, and silken chambray, woven exclusively for the manufacturers, are to be had. Styles are one and two-piece, with contrasting dark bow ties and belts.

Flower-Printed Beach Cottons

A BEACH DRESS is of a homespun cotton black printed in a South Seas design, with a straw halter instead of shoulder straps.

A tennis frock or cabana dress is of a Tahitian flower print, with tied shoulders and a belt. No back, of course.

There is a spectator sports frock of flowered dimity in a Tahiti print, with a ruffled collar, a ruffled hemline, and a sash around the middle with a bow in front. It is one-piece, and has brief capelet sleeves.

SERVE A DOLLAR DINNER

By MARTHA LEE

HOUSEWIVES who have learned by experience that you can't have your cake-money and eat it are being won over to the vogue for serving a thrift dinner one day of each week.

Dietitians have devised some very delicious dinners which can be served at a cost of 25 cents per person. By the use of these meanus, women have found that a guest dinner each week, can be nicely balanced in the budget, providing one day is set aside for the dollar dinner.

And don't think for a moment that this budget dinner need be an unattractive meal.

Smart foods are not necessarily expensive ones, and a little planning you can have a list of foods for these budget meals which will add a very dressed-up appearance to the dinner.

PATTY SHELLS

For example, flaked fish—canned tuna, salmon or any inexpensive canned fish—is very delicious and pleasing in appearance when creamed, served in patty shells and garnished with paprika and parsley.

Carrot curls made of fresh boiled carrots, scooped out and filled with spinach, and heading a potato chip for a sail, add a jaunty nautical appearance to your dinner—and a wealth of vitamins.

Keep a scrap book for bright ideas on budget foods. It's lots of fun and an endless saving in time when you are trying to conjure up one of these meals in a hurry.

IDEAS IN PICTURES

Cut out pictures and recipes of foods that make your mouth water. Paste them in, and when you discover exactly how much they cost to serve, jot down the cost beside the recipe or picture. If one of your neighbors is a scrap-book fan, also, you will find it helpful to exchange your bright ideas.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON
CHAPTER 377

I THINK the feral impulse—to slash, and tear, and slay—flies closer to the surface in most of us than we like to acknowledge.

I know that, for myself, I had an almost uncontrollable desire to seize Edith Fairfax's throat in both my hands and choke her mocking, laughing voice into silence.

To think that fate should have so muddled things as to permit this malicious woman to usher Dicky, upon his return from the hospital, into a scene so easily misunderstood as this one!

She had been planning something like this all the morning. I realized this now, as I had vaguely feared it before. She must have been waiting outside the library door all the morning hoping that she would be able to bring Dicky into that room at a moment when I should be in conference with Hugh, over Lee Chow, and thus perforce appearing to be in attendance upon his bedside.

She must have seized upon Dicky the moment he came from the hospital,

From the hospital! In sudden remembrance, and forgetting everything else, I took my hand from Hugh's—he had held on to it, either mechanically or scorning to drop it upon Dicky's entrance—and ran to my husband, gripping him by the shoulder which had received the scratch, and looking anxiously up into his eyes.

"Oh, Dicky! Tell me, is your arm all right?" I asked. "I have been so anxious."

I was shaking inwardly as I made the plea, for there was a look in Dicky's eyes that told me he had missed no whit of the little tableau which had met them when Edith flung open the door and ushered him in.

He had been fondly holding on to my hand, and had heard Hugh ask if he had done anything to upset me, adding the fervent declaration that he wouldn't do anything to hurt me "for the world."

It seemed to me, as I waited with my eyes fixed on his, that I could not endure it if I did not find out at once about his arm, and if he did not do something which would show the woman watching us that her malevolent little scheme had not succeeded.

EDITH "LAYS IT ON"

If Edith had understood Dicky's psychology better, she might have gained her objective of humiliating me. For Dicky was angry. I knew that as well as I did that his cool manner covered the seething misery of Hugh, which always lies not far beneath the surface of his consciousness.

But Edith could not "let well enough alone." By remaining silent after her first airy little speech, she would have almost certainly succeeded in her project of goading Dicky into openly flouting me. Instead, she proceeded to "gild the lily and paint the rose" by giving a gay little chuckle, and saying in a high, lilting voice:

"Has she been anxious! And how! The atmosphere around here has fairly oozed with her anxiety. We've all thrilled to it, but, oh, my poor Dicky bird! Don't let your Mamie kid you so flagrantly. We innocent bystanders have been under the outraged impression that not your arm but Hughie's shoulder was the object of her solicitude."

Her voice was gay, insouciant, and she laughed over at me in apparently friendly fashion.

It was one of those subtle attacks which only a woman could make successfully, an attack that if necessary could be camouflaged later by the apparently sincere alibi:

MADGE CONQUERS

"But I thought everybody knew I was fooling."

She did not have the opportunity to utter this alibi however.

Whether Dicky read aright the real relationship existing for his arm was in my eyes, together with the frantic fear that he would blame me before Edith, or whether he was irritated at Edith's officiousness, I did not know. But I saw him smile ruefully over at Edith with his brows knitted into a frown, and said crossly in Joe Miller's joke book."

Then, answering me, he said: "My arm is all right, Madge. They gave me a clean bill of health just now. I'll be able to use it just as well as ever in a week. But what has happened to old Hugh?"

Declarer Makes Extra Trick

In the following deal the declarer made six-odd because he wisely cashed all the cards of his trump suit.

In discarding on these, one of his opponents had to create a situation in which the declarer could gain a trick.

It was not a slam contract, but it was played in a duplicate game and the over-trick was of value.

(1) Since North has failed to bid his hearts on two previous opportunities, he has definitely shown that he has only a shaded suit.

(2) South persists in bidding his club suit because he knows that North has only four hearts, and in addition he is anxious to score his 100 honors.

West assumed from the bidding that South's trump suit was solid, so he opened the four of clubs as a safe opening lead.

South, after drawing trumps, decided that nothing could be gained by playing the other suits immediately, so he cashed his last two trumps.

East let go a spade and a diamond. South then took the Ace and Queen of hearts and led his last heart. He correctly guessed the distribution of the suit and finessed the 10-spot, after which he led the last heart from the dummy.

On this play East was reduced to four cards. He had to save two spades and therefore could save only the Ace and Jack of diamonds. South therefore dropped a spade, saving three diamonds.

On a diamond lead from dummy, East played the Jack. South took it with the Queen and led back his little diamond. The Ace fell and the King was established.

If South had run to the heart suit before leading out all his trumps, East could have saved three diamonds and South would at best have been forced to guess how to play the hand for six.

Beach Hats

ONE of the newest beach hats of the season is the tent-flap hat, which may button under the chin or button on top of the crown.

Suspender play suits, like the brevitated overalls, are worn with striped basque shirts, and the longer pleated shorts are much in the fashion picture.

And there is the hood for beach wear, which sometimes attached to a beach coat and sometimes is a variation of the omnipresent scarf.

Lace Sweaters

Lace sweaters are headliners in the shops these days. They are made of string or linen yarn, and they come in delectable pastels, with aquamarine and dusty pink in the lead.

They are showing hand-knit dresses and suits in lacy weaves also, in all the summer pastels.

Lace blouses are the top for wear with cocktail and dinner suits of dark crepe or satin.

FIGHT REOPENS OVER ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Dallas, Tex., June 22—A new fight over Elliott Roosevelt was forecast here today after the President's son won his first skirmish in the councils of the young Democrats of Texas Club.

In a tumultuous session of the Dallas group last night a resolution seeking his ouster as first vice-president of the state organization was voted down, 16 to 12, and immediately afterward a resolution was adopted, 16 to 13, indorsing President Roosevelt's New Deal.

However, Phil Overton, Dallas attorney who led the fight against young Roosevelt, announced he would take the controversy before the club's executive committee at a July 16 meeting.

"I'm not through," said Overton. "I'll fight it out at the executive meeting."

Elliott Roosevelt commented: "That's fine. If a majority of the members want me in the position, I certainly will do my best for the organization and fill out my term."

DESERT HERITAGE

A Tale of Love, and Foreign Legion Adventures

By P. C. Wren

Author of BEAU GESTE

Spanish Maine Faces Eight Years as Prisoner; Finds Himself in Hell Camp

The Story So Far:

CONSUELA VANBRUGH falls in love with Sir Harry Vane, prominent young Englishman, on the voyage of the S.S. Amazon from South America to England. At Bermuda, Manoel Maine—known as Spanish Maine—boards the ship, quite accidentally runs into Consuela, recognizes her as something out of his shady past and threatens exposure unless she pays heavily. He confers with Consuela's brother, Otis, who has never heard of him before, and tells him an amazing story of his life, leading up to his connection with Consuela: An aristocratic Spaniard, forced to run away from home because of a girl; enlists in the Foreign Legion after killing a German student of Heidelberg in a duel; escapes from the Legion and in South America becomes the lover of a famous courtesan, La Belle Lolo, by giving her a huge fake diamond, which a half-crazed monk had sold him as an authentic diamond.

Lola runs away from him in Spain with £25,000 secured by selling the diamond, which was genuine. He trails her to Monte Carlo, tries to steal the diamond back, is caught and offered the chance to enlist in the Legion again or go to jail.

Back in the Legion, he and another Legionnaire murder a pawnbroker and make away with his fortune of £20,000 in jewels and gold. They escape to the Sahara, but Spanish is left at the bottom of a deep well by his companion in crime, with the fortune, which he secretes. Spanish Maine continues his story:

Spanish Maine has vivid day dreams of the handling of the treasure in the old well.

IT looked to me as though that was the end of Manoel Maine. For there I was, a hundred feet or so below the surface of the Sahara and no possible means of getting up.

And there was poor old Mac, with thirty thousand pounds' worth of stuff just out of his grasp and no earthly means of getting at it.

How I did laugh at poor old Mac!

And how poor old Mac did curse at me—as though I'd done it! If I objected to his having cut the rope he objected quite as strongly, or more so, to my having taken the loot down the well.

All our trouble for nothing. And a very unpleasant death as the sole reward of our labors.

It was a moot point as to which of us was the better off. I, imprisoned below, had got plenty of water. Mac, waterless above, had got plenty of freedom.

A lovely situation. Laugh! I was never so amused in my life.

But the next two or three days weren't really amusing, and I didn't know whether they were worse for Mac or for me. Probably for him, I thought; as I at least had plenty of water, whereas he must be dying of thirst.

And I was rather surprised to hear no more of him after I had called out that I had got the loot.

But Mac had got a soft streak, a weak spot. Very sloppy and sentimental, really.

Before cutting the rope he had hauled up our water-bottles two or three times, as I filled them; and he gave most of it to the better of the two camels, in the hope of getting it on its feet again.

He succeeded.

And what do you think he did?

Rode straight to a French poste, the isolated outlying Fort Bugeaud that we were carefully avoiding, and gave himself up—telling the commandant of the place that he had left his copain alive and unhurt!

OF course you will say that the idea was that this would give him a chance of getting the loot. But—no. He must have known that he was landing us both in gaol with the certainty of a conseil de guerre sentence for desertion, even if they couldn't prove any connection between us and the murder of Mendoza.

He had no hope whatever of getting the loot. He had repented and was simply saving my life—or giving me a chance of life—at the risk of his own.

Promptly the commandant at Fort Bugeaud clapped Mac in a cell and sent off a sergeant and a patrol of goumiers to the dry well, of the existence and location of which he was, of course, well aware.

I tell you I was glad to hear the voice of that sergeant.

And they got to work and lowered the palm-fibre rope which they'd brought for the purpose.

[illegible]ly, long before they'd fixed up [illegible] well-rope as the old one had [illegible], I had buried the loot in the sand, right in the very middle—in the hole I had made digging for water—thinking that, if I lived, I'd come back for it some day.

On the long journey back to Marakmez I got several opportunities of a quiet word with Mac; and, speaking in English, reassured him on the subject of the loot. I told him it was "behind a loose stone five feet from the ground on the opposite side of the well from which the rope came down over the grooved palm-trunk edge."

The information reassured him a good deal. There was nothing now to connect us with the affaire Mendoza; and the loot was where he'd be able to find it if he survived to go and look.

I SMILED to myself at the pictures of Mac going down that well and digging out stones until the floor of the well was buried under them. The more he worked the more deeply he'd bury the treasure—under the stones and rock he tore out from the wall of the well!

More likely he'd find the well half full of water again by the time he was free to visit it.

Anyway, whatever he found, he would not find the money. If anyone found that thirty thousand pounds of buried treasure, it would be I.

Yes, I or nobody. Nobody in the world but I knew where it was hidden. Nobody but I! And if the conseil de guerre decided that I was a murderer and gave me the death sentence, it would be—nobody.

However, as is quite evident, they did not shoot me. They gave me what some people consider worse, eight years' travaux forces—eight years' penal servitude—undoubtedly, with one exception, the harshest and most brutal penal servitude on the face of the earth.

But I was in a rather different position from the average detenu, the unlikely miserable military penitencier. I had something to live for—three-quarters of a million pesetas safely cached. And no other living soul on this earth knew where it was, except my copain Mac; and although he knew it was in the well he did not know where.

IT was not long before I found myself in one of these lone, lost, isolated, out-of-the-way prison-camps, commanded by a Sergeant-Major.

This Sergeant-Major, a Corsican named Sartene—they are all Corsicans—had been too long at his job. He'd got nerves; and there is no tyrant so cruel, so dangerous, as the frightened tyrant.

I don't mean to say that Sergeant-Major Sartene was really frightened; but he'd got the jumps. He knew that some of his flock were pretty tired of life, and he was making them more and more tired of it, and that when one of them decided to quit it, he'd certainly take Sergeant-Major with him.

The man lived with his hand on the butt of his revolver, and he seemed to spin like one of those Japanese waltzing mice.

And not only was this wretched man, with his few subordinates, in charge of a hundred dangerous criminals, any one of whom would have killed him as readily as he would a bug, but he was responsible for the making of a road through a zone dissidente, and at any time there might be a sudden swift attack.

Yes, he was a badly worried man, what with the heat, the dust-storms, the wicked travaux publics criminals, and the Chleuhs who might start sniping or, worse still, swoop down, at any moment.

I REMEMBER one chap, a Frenchman as it happened, called Dupont, a real mauvais sujet, a very tough guy—(he had tattooed on his forehead "Victim. Prison Martyr")—who having felt that he'd had enough, decided to kill Sergeant Sargoni, one of Sartene's henchmen.

Now Sergeant Sargoni had done his very best to reclaim this scoundrel by means of wise deterrent discipline, that ought to have made him a wiser and better man.

He had hung him up by his hands with his toes just touching the ground. Oh, for hours at a time.

He had, at the end of a red-hot day of heavy, dusty labor, served him out his water ration—super-saturated with salt.

He had kept him thereafter without water for 48 hours, and had then given him his water ration—super-saturated with salt.

He had tied his feet together and fastened the end of the cord to the saddle of a pack-mule and given him a ride—on the ground.

He had treated a nasty sore on the man's shoulder—a sore caused by carrying heavy stones resting on the bare flesh—with quick-lime.

He had bound Dupont to a post, and had then sprinkled sugar on his bare head, face and shoulders. Wasps, hornets, flies and all manner of insects like sugar.

SARGONI had, as I say, done everything to reform the fellow, to improve him, to deter him from further wrong-doing, but without success. Indeed, with such lamentable failure that he determined to kill the Sergeant.

Sargoni's skull was so thick that even Dupont failed to crack it when he hit it with his shovel. And instead of going to the Better Land and taking Sargoni with him, Dupont went to an even worse one—Guiana.

I had not the slightest desire to go to the Better Land, either with or without Sergeant-Major Sartene, or anybody else. This one was good enough for me, to long as I'd thirty thousand pounds' worth of treasure hidden away in it.

But there again—"Man proposes . . ."

The chain-gang took Dupont's bad luck rather to heart, and took Sergeant Sargoni's good luck rather badly. Fancy anybody working himself up to the point of giving Sargoni a bat on the head with a shovel, and not doing the job thoroughly!

Merely making him more brutal, more vindictive, more savage; making things worse all around for everybody.

And it was just when the pot was boiling over, that the chain-gang, still under the command of Sergeant-Major Sartene and Sergeants Sargoni and Bonifacio, went to Dar-bel-Hassin to carry out a piece of contract-work.

In the next instalment read how Spanish Maine's one thought is to escape and regain the great treasure. The convicts revolt—See what happens!

Rotch Admits Dodging Politics in ERA Jobs

Arthur G. Rotch's one answer to the charges of political favoritism in the ERA hurled at him by State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley was that he tried in every instance to appoint the best man available.

He said his decision on whether the man would be suitable as a local ERA administrator ignored the candidate's political affiliation.

As a result, Rotch added, Democrats had been appointed in Republican towns and vice versa, along with every other possible combination.

At an afterthought, he stated that all ERA administrators happened to be Democrats, and that most of them held their jobs when he took over the administration from Joseph P. Carney, former CWA administrator.

Led by Miss Florence M. Birmingham of Brighton, women members of the Women's Political Club picketed the entire block in which the ERA offices are located, carrying banners charging Rotch with discriminating against single unemployed women.

AUSTEN LAKE

Joe Louis Ringwise Beyond Years

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 22—Stripped down to the raw buff, Joe Louis, black hope of the prize ring, is no darker than the shade of new-born whiskey.

Austen Lake

A magnificent animal, whose muscles under a tan skin show no adult chords or biscuit bulges.

Only the supple roundness of youth and softly modeled swells that speak elasticity and the stealthy slink of a jungle cat.

No ray of pity shines in his black eyes. No emotions chase over his saffron mask. Just brooding surliness and slack-lipped contempt as though absorbed by his mission of destruction. Cold as gun-metal.

When Joe ducked under the ropes of the training platform, his mother, a full-bosomed colored woman of the Pancake-Mammy type, sat among the press rows. The woman was a picture of bewildered wonder as she squatted with her daughters, Emmerell, Eulalie and Vunies—cream-skinned girls with smears of lipstick.

She fidgeted her bulges as her last-born flicked a greeting with his glove. That was all, just a sullen jerk of his russet mitten as he went into the shadow-shuffle that was preamble to punishing his sparring mates.

If he is not actually black magic, at least Louis has predatory boxing instinct that goes deeper than ring teachings of his Negro tutor, Jack Blackburn. It traces back to his jungle forebears, whose primitive gifts are sometimes handed down over the years, like concentrated salts in a prize package.

* * *

Joe Means Business

Joe is a hulky boy for his 21 years, and ring-wise beyond his one year of professional experience. He throws either fist equally well.

He has the instinctive head-slip which is an almost forgotten art with modern fighters, an elusive rolling of the jaw to let a jab graze the whiskers and open the way to a swift body slam.

It may be useful when he faces Carnera's stabbing left—the Italian's one best punch.

And Louis is not foot-foolish, as is the trade expression for the rhumba-dancing type of fighter to which so many Negroes belong. For the feet, more than hands, are boxing telltales and show when the fighter is in solid punching position.

Since the steam behind the wallop comes from close upwards, it is significant that Louis is rarely off the canvas, seldom breaks his shuffling stance.

Though he did not turn on the full heat of his savagery, there was no charity in the unblinking beam of Joe's black eyes as he pursued his hapless partners around the ring.

Once he sank his glove up to the wrist into the middle of a melancholy giant named Dixon, who was introduced as the "fighting philosopher."

Dixon's eyes popped out of their sockets like twin boiled eggs, and he sank down on a bony knee. He wobbled, he rose.

But Louis took careful sight between his ears and tagged him with a stinging right just as the bell rang, and the licorice colored fighter staggered off through the laughing crowd.

There was no glimmer of sympathy in Louis' dead pan face. No pat on the shoulder for the veteran.

I doubt that all this is a fair measure of Louis as he will have to shape Tuesday night against Carnera. The Negro partners have been so well chopped by this time that they instantly go flea-hopping and buck-jumping around the ring.

* * *

Is it a Dream?

It will be educational to see what the puce-colored youth can do against a more stationary target like Carnera and whether he can reach up to tag his high chin as readily as he does these lower ones.

Louis seemed content to polish his timing, sometimes sticking up his jaw as an invitation and then receding it to the point where the blow faded away to a mere pillow tap.

And he had a trick of tending punches with his left, an almost negligent gesture, and continuing the movement into a stiff counter, almost in one motion.

Somehow, I don't think he can do that with Carnera, who is a head-on type of fighter. And, bear in mind, too, that Louis, with all his speed, has never had to take rough-housing such as the ex-circus freak, with his extra 50 pounds, will bring down over his shoulders like a necklace of frankfurters.

I doubt that in his twelve months of pre-ring work, Amber Joe has ever had to fight going away from his man, a guerilla style of flank-boxing in which he harries best who discreetly retreats, as Baer did so successfully against Primo last year.

Lumbering, slaughter house sledges that they are, Carnera's blows are damaging when they land. A single overhand flog that caught Jack Sharkey behind the ear turned the tide of victory and dropped him with his head in a black velvet bag.

The best way I know for a fighter to knock himself out is either to get a running start and ram his head against a fire plug, or to bore head-on into Carnera's awkward floggings.

Then, too, Tuesday night, Carnera may survive more punishment than he took from Baer, because he now is standing on the brink of professional oblivion.

He has to stand up or else fade out forever like a bad dream, his earnings plucked by the slinky crew who have juggled his affairs.

There's more in this than meets the eye.

* * *

What Ho!

A strange camp this, with every shade of manhood from peach-pink to ebony, with intermittent tones of fawn, tobacco, coffee and cooking chocolate.

They are pleasantly courteous these Negro handlers, wearing their best holiday manner and anxious to make the white visitors stay congenial.

Roxborough, a sophisticated, intelligent man of middle shade, who divides Louis' management with Black, who looks like a Cuban, showed me around the fighter's lodge. It is trim and orderly.

Harlem detectives stand at the alert to keep poisoners away from the family soup kettle. There are giggles of the sisters Eulalie, Emmerell and Vunies from an ivy shawled veranda. And the pancake mammy who sits fidgeting her bulges in an air of bewildered wonder.

"Seems lak yestiddy he wus on'y a cah'n baby," she told me in her Alabama burr, showing firm teeth in a shy wide smile.

The dry stubble of those old cornfields, the red gumbo in the dooryard, the ragged gingham and the kinky kid is far behind. She wears a custom gown of satin now, a tailored coat and a plain golden band on her finger.

2 YANKS Win on London COURT

London, June 22 (AP)—Two Americans won their way to the singles finals of the Queens Club tennis tournament today, but the finals were called off and the names of both Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and David N. Jones of New York will be inscribed upon the championship cup.

Officials said since both Americans are entered in the Wimbledon championships beginning Monday they would grant their request and not ask them to play this afternoon.

The same procedure was followed in the women's singles finals.

Allison advanced today at the expense of a fellow countryman, young Donald Budge of Oakland, Cal. The Texan rallied after a mad start to win 10—8, 6—3. Jones, former captain of the Columbia University tennis team, had an easy time with Daniel Prenn of Germany, 6—3, 6—0, 6—3.

The women's finalists were Mme. Sylvia Henrotin of France, who defeated Signora Lucia Valerio of Italy, 6—3, 6—4, 6—3, in the semi-final round, and Senorita Anita Lizana of Chile, who eliminated Miss Susan Noel of England, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Berkeley Bell, New York, defeated Bin Kie Kho, China, 6—3, 9—7, in the quarter final singles today.

SEMIFINALS In New Orleans

Richmond, Va., June 22 (INS)—Present one upset, the Southern Amateur Golf Tournament moved into the semifinal round with Fred Haas, 19-year-old defending champion from New Orleans, crushing Ross Puette, of Richmond, seven and six, in one of four quarterfinal matches.

The upset was provided by Bob Riegel of Richmond, when he nosed out Johnny Morris, medalist winner from Birmingham, one up.

Revolta Leads

Chicago, June 22—Johnny Revolta shot into the lead in the Medinah gold championship by shooting a par 69 in the first round. A 34 and a 35 broke par by two blows. Seventeen in the field ranged from 69 to 75.

FUCHS, MURPHY IN TAP ROOM HUDDLE

HERMAN GOES TO REDS

By Joe Cashman

Noticed Major Francis P. Murphy, Nashua shoe magnate, in earnest conversation with Judge Emil E. Fuchs of the Braves.

They had their heads together in the executives' tap room.

The major, who has money invested in the Triple A franchise, has been reported as being interested in buying control of the club.

The Braves and Phillies must have waived on "Babe" Herman, who has been sent back to the Reds by the Pirates. After June 15, swaps can be made only via the waiver route, though the price paid may be in excess of the $7500 waiver figure. Herman was offered the Braves in exchange for Hal Lee earlier in the season. Bill McKechnie laughed at "Pie" Traynor.

Wally Berger's 12th home run of the season didn't put him in a first-place tie in the National League's round-tripper derby. Mel Ott of the Giants bashed out No. 13 on the same afternoon.

Fred Frankhouse was hit hard by the Cubs in the Ladies' Day game, but with a little luck he might have won. The Grimm clan scored three runs in the first frame because "Buck" Jordan failed to catch a pop foul.

And they added three more in the fifth due to a Marnaville miscue. There was nothing tainted, however, about any of the four runs they put over at Larry Benton's expense in the ninth.

Freddie Lindstrom had a gala day at bat. He hit safely on his first five trips to the plater. A long fly to Lee stopped his streak on his sixth time up.

Tex Carleton proved he could hit as well as pitch, getting three singles in successive times at bat.

Every Cub made at least one safety.

Frank Hogan's third - inning home run was his second of the season. It was a line drive into the leftfield stands.

The Giants look invincible. When they walloped Pittsburgh they increased their National League lead to 7½ games.

Robert Moses Grove chalked up an abbreviated 3 to 0 shut-out victory to put the Red Sox one game up in the series with the Browns.

Rain halted the tilt, supposed to be the first of a twin-bill, in the sixth inning. Grove yielded only three hits while Reynolds and Almada hit home runs off Fay Thomas.

Paul Dean dropped his third straight decision when the Phillies walloped the world's champion Cardinals.

LITTLE Cards 73 in OPEN TUNEUP

By Associated Press

Muirfield, Scotland, June 22—Joe Kirkwood, the Australian trick shot artist, with a 35-36—69, teamed with the American veteran MacDonald Smith to defeat W. Lawson Little, British and American amateur champion and the British pro, Abe Bailey, one up in the final full practice round for the British open golf championship today.

Although the traps forced little to take 6's, he scored a good 73 including six 3's. Mitchell shot a 74, Smith had a 75.

Little, who is having trouble controlling his drives, received instructions from Mitchell.

Laisy he said: "I believe I am beginning to hit them again."

Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., contended himself with an hour of driving practice. He and Joe Esar of Waco, Texas, plan a round later today.

Cubs' Bomber Completes Homer Tour

Across the plate goes Cavaretta of the Cubs, completing his home run tour of the bases, opening the second inning of the first game of a pair with the Braves at the Wigwam this afternoon. The run helped the Cubs to a 7-to-4 victory.

CLEAN SWEEP FOR ELI

By Associated Press

New London, Ct., June 22—In comparative solitude, alone on the sunlit Thames in their slim shell, with only themselves for company, and deep contentment lightening their work, eight husky young men of Yale today rowed Harvard into the worst defeat the Crimson has suffered in the last 41 years of their 83-years-old regatta.

Yale won by about 11 lengths or more, a stretch so wide that floundering Harvard, paced by a stroke, Ed Simmons of Baltimore, who never set a varsity beat before, was almost lost in the ruck.

It was all but swallowed up in the fleet of hundreds of yachts and pleasure craft that stayed over despite last evening's postponement because of rough water, first time that's happened since 1894.

Victory for the astounding Elis completed the second successive clean sweep the crews of Ed Leader have scored over Charley Whiteside's Harvard fleet.

Yale's margin of victory was 45 seconds as Jim Castle of Honolulu eped the blue shell over the finish line, turned with the rest of the crew, and waited for Harvard to pull up laboriously at Bartlett's Cove, four miles above the start at the railroad bridge.

Grim Winners

Yale was timed in 20 minutes, 19 seconds and Harvard in 21:04. There was grimness about Yale's victory that took a great deal of the fun out of the bright day for the crowd only half filled the observation train.

The Elis, with President Roosevelt looking on from the referee's launch for the second straight year, had won both the Friday freshman and junior varsity sprints by two-fifths of a second margins. The President, with Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of his family, went home to Hyde Park last evening after seeing his son and namesake, Franklin D., Jr., beaten again with his Harvard Alma Mater in the jayvee test.

Yale, with Castle, elected 1936 captain after the race, set a distance-destroying beat all the way. It rowed as if it still remembered very distinctly that Harvard, with its three successive great crews stroked by Gerry Cassedy, showed no mercy in the Crimson winning streak of 1931 through 1933. Yale now has won 39 varsity races, Harvard 34, since the start of the oldest of American sports competition in 1852.

Elis Lead at Start

At the start, oozing power, Yale shot into a quick lead getting the stroke evenly and eightlily up to a 40 a minute and the race was as good as over before a quarter mile was past. The Eli margin increased to better than two lengths in the first half mile. From there on it was a somber procession, for all the brightness of the day and the color of the fleet and crowds.

Yale had three lengths at amile, four at a mile and a half, six to seven at two miles and from there on, the distance between was a guessing game. It lengthened steadily even though the Elis were stroking only 22 times to the minute through the body of the four miles and by the time Castle lifted the stroke to 27 for a sprinting finish, Harvard was almost lost from sight.

The Crimson, beaten in the sprint season by all the other Eastern crews except Columbia and Massachusetts Tech, experimented with Simmons in the driver's seat, fifth stroke in the boat this season, but the results were the same.

New London, Ct., June 22 (INS-US)—James C. Castle, stroke of the Yale crew, which today swept to victory over Harvard, was elected captain of the Eli 1936 crew here this afternoon. Castle is a senior, whose home is in Honolulu.

The defeated Harvard eight selected Raymond S. Clark, bow, as captain for 1936. Clark is a native of New York City and prepared for Harvard at Groton.

Teacher!

Big Pie at N. U.

The possibility that "Pie" Traynor and several of his Pittsburgh Pirates may demonstrate baseball technique at the Northwestern University Coaching School, which opens Monday, was voiced today at the university.

The brother of the Pirates' manager, "Young Pie," has starred at third base for the Huskies for the past three seasons.

If enough of the coaches attending the athletic session request the moves, attempt will be made to get the services of several Braves and Pirates for demonstration purposes.

The regular curriculum calls for lectures, moving pictures and exhibitions on football, basketball, and training.

Already there is a demand for boxing, and Directors Al McCoy and Ed Parsons will have Dick Harlow, who will tutor football, instruct the pugilistic Breddocks.

GENERAL A. WINS FIRST

By WALTER KILEY

Narragansett Park, R. I., June 22—An early crowd of more than 25,000 taxed the seating capacity as Narragansett's first Saturday program of racing slipped into high gear.

Both the grandstand and the clubhouse were overflowing with additional thousands filing in long after the opening number.

Threatening clouds hung overhead, while below, the crowd went shirt-sleeved in the warm mugginess.

General A, running neck and neck with Ima Greenock and Lovito most of the way, stuck his nose out front in a driving finish to win over Ima Grenock with Lovito taking the show a length back.

The third favorite in a row came romping home as Jack Howard's Molly Greenock won easily by two and a half lengths over the 75-1 shot Antarctic, which paid $47.30 for place. Dancing Cloud lost place by a half length after a game effort.

Seabiscuit ran a front race all the way to win the second number by two lengths over Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Ned Reigh. Tugboat Frank was a poor third. Jockey Steffen on Ned Reigh lodged a foul claim against Seabiscuit's led the track record for the disallowed it.

Seabiscuit's time of 1.00,3, equaling the track record for the distance set by Pantoufle on August 24, 1934.

BEST BET—CUTIE FACE

Narragansett Park, June 22—Cutie face appears to be a well-placed thoroughbred in the one mile and a sixteenth of the sixth number here on Monday afternoon.

The fleet daughter of Chilhowee is in the peak of her form, as may be attested by her corking second to Candy Maid, in a swiftly run six furlongs dash of yesterday. In front of that at Rockingham, she was galloping over a similar lot to that opposing her on the washday card.

FIRST RACE—KRONA, DARK THATCH, FREE SPIRIT

FIRST RACE—$1000, maiden, two-year-olds, claiming, five furlongs.

PP	Horse	Wt.	Jockey	P. Odds	Comment
5	Krona	115	Howell	6-1	May be the right one
9	Dark Scratch	118	Sullivan	4-1	Second to Cash Book
3	Free Spirit	112	Seabo	6-1	Weight off, chance
1	Sir Rollie	115	Pollard	6-1	Lost ground last time
14	Blind Talk	115	J. Burke	6-1	Speedy, may last
4	Sky Pirate	115	Bethel	8-1	Did not like mud
3	Irish Hero	x107	Hanford	8-1	Rates a chance
10	Lost Vision	115	Fallon	8-1	Smart stable, look out
8	Secured	115	Pollard	15-1	May come to life
13	Falls City	115	Legere	20-1	Le[illegible] helped
7	Johns Son	112	Smock	20-1	First start, no line
11	Attaquechee	x107	Scott	20-1	Scant chance
6	Marble Star	112	Wall	20-1	Scant chance
12	Abbotsford	112	Pascuma	20-1	Scant chance

Shooting for a price here and expect to get same if Krona runs to top form. The Kane colorbearer is heaps better than recent efforts attest. Mayhap, this is the right spot. Dark Thatch, a corking second to Cashbook at Salem, shapes up all dangerous on the strength of that effort. Free Spirit is dropping weight and merits serious consideration.

SECOND RACE—TREASURY KEY, METTLE, POCKET

SECOND RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-old fillies. Six furlongs.

1	Treasury Key	107	Pascuma	3-1	Looks like right spot.
7	Mettle	107	Munden	6-1	Dangerous if sent back.
2	Pocket	112	Sage	6-1	Excellent money chance.
3	Wee Tune	109	Legere	6-1	Won last, moving up.
9	Chewawa	x102	C. Hanford	6-1	Last very good.
3	Kowtow	110	Winters	8-1	Not out of it.
4	Star Chase	107	Pollard	12-1	Works very fast.
5	Foreign Lady	107	Lynch	12-1	Some fair races.
6	Hot Griddle	107	Reid	20-1	Scant chance.

Treasury Key's last race may be tossed into discard. The Riddle colorbearer was up against it that day. In front of that she had worked brilliantly. Mettle is in smart hands and may come up one of those "good things" if sent right back on Monday. Pocket figures next best.

THIRD RACE—TAKUS, CANCEL, INFORMAL

THIRD RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, six furlongs.

2	Takus	x116	Hayward	2-1	The class, dropping down
14	Cancel	x116	Knisley	4-1	Last put him on edge
10	Informal	110	Allen	4-1	Rates a chance
4	Queen Vic	107	Fallon	10-1	Hard to guess
12	Tiger John	109	Legere	6-1	Outside chance
5	Winged Flight	109	Wholey	10-1	Some fair races
1	Gifted Lady	x99	Howell	12-1	In smart hands
20	Pryor	x110	C. Hanford	12-1	May not start
18	Air Line	x104	Howell	12-1	Speed last time
16	Appomattox	110	Munden	12-1	Good effort at Salem
15	Morden	x105	Stafford	12-1	Not out of it
9	Yancey	118	Pollard	15-1	Best races in mud
3	Just American	118	Winters	15-1	Route runner
10	Happy Inver	110	Martin	20-1	Speed last trip
17	Joemac	109	Seabo	20-1	Cheap maiden
7	Onward	x104	Griggs	20-1	Cheap maiden
6	Palatine	x113	Stafford	20-1	Not here
8	Sun Probate	x110	Greer	20-1	Not much
11	Radiator	x107	Deering	20-1	Won at Brookline
13	Dark Devil	x113	Deering	20-1	Not in form

TAKUS is dropping down from $3000 top and bottom company. If any account at all, the Weant colorbearer should never leave the issue in doubt. CANCEL raced as if a trifle short of work last time out at Rockingham. The Canter colt may prove hard to down if given a chance to perform. INFORMAL displayed good speed in placing to Chatterfol last trip.

FOURTH RACE—SANDY MACK, DRAWN SWORD, MAJOR GREENOCK

FOURTH RACE—$1200, claiming, two-year-olds, five furlongs.

4	Sandy Mack	x116	C. Hanford	5-2	Looks like the right one.
9	Drawn Sword	110	Wall	3-1	Last very good.
3	Major Greenock	112	Corbett	5-1	Won at Belmont Park.
1	John Tio	x107	Howell	8-1	Fighting chance.
5	Dream Kiss	109	Martin	8-1	Always trying.
10	Pretty Patricia	104	Pascuma	8-1	Hard to guess.
2	Edri	110	J. Burke	12-1	Last below standard.
11	September Child	109	Winters	15-1	Graduated last time.
6	Rich Strike	112	Laidley	15-1	Last helped.
7	Black Mischief	107	Smock	20-1	Improved last time.
8	Gay Edward	112	Fallon	20-1	Would surprise.

SANDY MACK strikes me as the class here. The Gratton colorbearer is the speed of the party on past dope and should make every pole a winning one. DRAWN SWORD, the main danger, displayed nice form in placing to Harolds Way last time. MAJOR GREENOCK drubbed a nice field in fast time last out at Belmont Park. He should prove troublesome.

FIFTH RACE—CHATMOSS, TERALICE, THOMASVILLE

FIFTH RACE—$1300, allowances, The Providence, three-year-olds and up, one mile and 70 yards.

8	Chatmoss	x106	Seabo	5-1	Last put him on edge
7	Teralice	115	Schaefer	5-2	The main danger
1	Thomasville	110	C. Hanford	3-1	On the improve
5	Fairsickle	103	Hayward	5-1	Never better
2	Palma	95	Wall	8-1	In light enough
3	Speedmore	110	Legere	12-1	Looks outmatched
6	Proud Girl	103	Howell	15-1	May need a race
4	Incandescent	103	Lynch	20-1	Works fast enough

Stringing along with CHATMOSS here. The T. Lee Evans trained thoroughbred turned in a much better race in the King Philip Handicap than the charts reveal. That effort was his first after a long layoff and there is every reason to expect a world of improvement. TERALICE, freshened up slightly, shapes up as the class on recent dope and is strictly the one to fear. THOMASVILLE has displayed remarkable improvement under Bill Irvine's training, but I find it impossible to place him over the top pair.

SIXTH—CUTIE FACE, COHORT MISS, BALIOS

SIXTH RACE—$1200, claiming, three-year-olds and up, 1 1-16 miles.

6	Cutie Face	x110	Wimger	2-1	Nice mare, never better
4	Cohort Miss	x104	Deering	7-2	In light, contender
1	Balios	116	Wall	5-1	Rates good chance
2	Wee Wink	x106	Howell	8-1	May take it all
3	Easiest Way	x105	C. Hanford	8-1	Stepping up
5	Taunton	110	Fallon	8-1	Some excellent races
7	Sand Baby	x111	Reid	8-1	Should go well

If anything upsets my dope and hands CUTIE FACE a drubbing in this affair it will likely be COHORT MISS. The latter is in under a feather of 103 pounds and will be running over top of horses during the last stages. BALIOS is much better than recent races reveal. He shapes up as a stout possibility despite a top-heavy impost of 116 pounds.

SEVENTH RACE—CHRYSMUTE, OUR JUSTICE, FLYING DERE

SEVENTH RACE—$1000, claiming, four-year-olds and up, 1 1-16 miles.

9	Our Justice	x104	Helm	8-1	The next best.
11	Flying Dere	x103	Phillips	4-1	Rates a chance.
7	Old Judge	x104	Deering	3-1	Last very good.
1	Chrysmute	x99	C. Hanford	6-1	Strictly the class.
6	Hut	104	Winters	6-1	Chance if sent back.
8	Big Show	109	Fallon	8-1	Last below standard.
3	Free	x104	Stafford	10-1	Wants fast track.
4	Adamite	114	Schutte	10-1	Best races in mud.
5	Catino	112	Legree	15-1	Drubbed poor lot.
2	Mack Sennett	x109	Howell	15-1	Speedy, may last.
10	Waswanappi	111	Mundin	15-1	Tough spot.

Just can't pass up CHRYSMUTE here. The Gratton colorbearer is dropping down and looms all over the class. OUR JUSTICE and FLYING DERE shape up as the main dangers. They are fancied as named.

Your entry must reach the "Daily Double" Handicap Game Editor of the Boston American, P. O. Box 1946, or deliver to 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, not later than 1 P. M., Monday, June 24.

Here are the Rules:

To play the "Daily Double" Game name the horses you think will win the first and third races at Narragansett. Then place the names of the horses you believe will run second and third in each of the two races.

20 pairs of tickets to the Narragansett Races will be given each day to winners.

Winners will be picked under the following rules:

Entries that pick the "Daily Double" will be given first consideration. Should there be fewer "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, winners of the remaining tickets will be scored as follows: First counts 3 points, second counts 4 points, and third counts 2 points in each of the two races. The entries scoring the largest number of points will be declared the winners.

In the event there are more "Daily Double" winners than there are prizes, the prizes will be given to the "Daily Double" winners who score the largest number of points in selecting the horses that run second and third in the first and third races. In scoring these winners the following rules will be observed: Place counts 4 points and show 2 points for each race. Tied contestants will each receive a ticket.

In the event any of the horses you pick are scratched, the next horse will be automatically moved up one space on your list. For example, should your first choice fail to start, the second horse named becomes your first choice and the third horse your second choice.

Except where horses are scratched, your selections must run in the order in which you list them on your entry blank in order to be counted. ONLY THE NAME OF ONE HORSE MAY BE SELECTED WHERE THE HORSES ARE COUPLED IN BETTING, AS IN ENTRIES AND FIELDS. The decision of the judges will be final and no entries returned.

A coupon for Tuesday's "Daily Double" selections will be printed Monday.

Each day's winners will be printed in all editions of the Boston Evening American the day after the races are run (Saturday's winners in Monday's editions).

WALLY BERGER MAKES 'BIG TEN' BATTING LIST

Mr. Boston Jee-Mee Preps for Danno

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news: Jimmy Londos is here to complete training for his finish mat bout with Dan O'Mahoney, Irish champion, at Fenway Park next Thursday night. He will do his daily dozen at Jerry Buckley's Gym on Friend street.

Londos says he will beat O'Mahoney in straight falls and then win from Chief Little Wolf in the

Mr. Boston

• • •

Londos will find O'Mahoney one of the toughest men he has ever met. The Greek heavyweight has never been opposed by a man as strong as the Irish champion.

• • •

I was greatly impressed by the wrestling form O'Mahoney has shown. He has mastered American wrestling styles and today can match headlocks, toe holds and arm bars with any of our mat stars.

• • •

Tommy Parle of Paul Bowser's office, who is assisting the Cross-Keys-Fenton Post in the handling of reservations to the O'Mahoney-Londos show, says a crowd of 30,000 persons will pay close to $60,000 to see the match. It is a "natural" and has attracted interest in all parts of the country.

• • •

DANNO AT CAMP

JACK McGrath has refused to permit O'Mahoney to make any more public appearances before his meeting with Londos. Danno will remain at his camp at Mansion Inn where he will get plenty of rest and much severe training.

• • •

It does not help an athlete's condition for him to appear at social functions and athletic nights while he is getting ready for an important test.

• • •

Paul Bowser is back from the Grand Circuit races and will be an interested ringside spectator when Danno and Londos clash. It was Bowser who brought the Irish champion to this country. He considers him one of the greatest wrestlers he has seen in action.

• • •

LOUIS' MONEY

A COAST and Middle West group has $32,000 to wager that Joe Louis will beat Primo Carnera. There will be $1000 bet on the Louis-Carnera go for every dime that was wagered on the Braddock-Baer match.

• • •

Few would back Braddock as they considered him a tip-over for Max. This is why the odds were from 7 to 1 to 10 to 1. If there had been any Braddock money around the odds would have been tighter.

• • •

I shall be at Louis' camp today, and will have my nose up of this great colored heavyweight in tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

• • •

I have never seen Louis, and will be interested to see how he compares with Johnson, Langford and other famous colored heavyweights

• • •

SMITH WAITS

LOU SMITH says he will not close any deal for the sale of Rockingham Park until the cold cash is put on the line. Lou does not intend to accept mortgages or notes. He wants the old cash.

• • •

Smith's price of $1,600,000 for Rockingham Park is a fair one. A successful race meeting will make $500,000.

• • •

I have always liked the location of Rockingham Park. It is situated on high land, and has beautiful surroundings.

• • •

Lou is going ahead with plans for Agawam which will be located outside of Springfield

• • •

$1,000,000

WALTER O'Hara tells me he expects a handle of $1,000,000 at Narragansett Park on July 4.

There would have been a million-dollar handle at Narragansett last Armistice Day if there had been more windows for the sale and also for the cashing of mutuel tickets.

• • •

O'Hara has had additional windows built at Narragansett Park and is prepared for his million-dollar day.

Maguire Again

New London, June 22—Dick Maguire, Harvard's junior catcher, was re-elected captain of the varsity baseball team following the game with Yale. Maguire has been one of the mainstays of the team this season and a real fighter behind the plate.

JOE PALOOKA Old Faithful MULE

Maranville, Moriarty Going and Coming

By Joe Cashman

The Springfield kid gave way to the boy from across the tracks in Holyoke.

Walter Maranville, oldest Brave, had his remarkable comeback halted temporarily, at least, when he was replaced in the sixth inning of the ladies' day game by Eddie Moriarty, newest Brave, who wasn't born when the Rabbit began to add to his brilliant chapter to Tribal history.

That's baseball! Also life. Youth must be served eventually.

Moriarty, just out of Holy Cross, donned a Braves uniform for the first time an hour or so before the game started.

The Purple captaining decision to cast his lot at the Wigwam was more or less a surprise.

A famed slugger for three years at Mt. St. James, he had many big league scouts on his trail and received countless attractive offers as it turned a decision to sign. It then.

Then, he quickly yielded to the persuasive oratory of Bill McKechnie right after he had finished his college career by leading the Crusaders to victory over their arch rivals, Boston College, on Tuesday last.

Not that young Eddie at any time debated whether he should go into pro ball after completing his education

Baseball in the majors has long been his aim. It just so happened that he decided McKechnia could help him the best boost toward his goal.

Proving that Holy Cross made no mistake was convincingly signalled Edward Moriarty, 22, of Holyoke, cut as deserving of one of the prized magna cum laude degrees.

AND ME, TOO

The Purple "power house" watched a bad pitch go by, and then sailed into the next one for a clean single to right center.

That was Wally Berger's 12th homer, and another circuit drive by Large Francis Hogan, were the only home run features as the Braves were drubbed by the Cubs, 11 to 3.

Moriarty won't be used regularly right away. It's planned to bring him along gradually.

McKechnia considers him a fine hitter, who has several rough edges as a second-sacker that practice and experience will erase.

Eddie has played first and third as well as second. He made all his jobs safe by his hitting.

He finished with an average of well over .400 at Holy Cross this year and stood out with the stick in every game he played with the Crusaders against big league foes. He bashed out a 425-foot home run against "Lefty" Grove last spring.

He's an oddity among athletes in that he was a brilliant student. He finished high school at the age of 15.

Then he worked three years and came back to gallop through the exacting course at Holy Cross and gain a magna cum laude degree.

ROMAN Soldier Seeks $25,000 PURSE

By Associated Press

Chicago, June 22—Roman Soldier, bargain horse of the American turf, was after another $25,000 prize today.

The game little black three-year old has been installed as favorite to triumph in the $25,000 added American Derby at a mile and a quarter at Washington Park this afternoon. If victorious, the son of Cohort-Misha will be back in the running for the three-year-old championship of 1935, as a challenger to Omaha.

With prospects for fair weather a crowd of 25,000 spectators will go to the Derby and line the rails to see Roman Soldier attempt to beat the most fashionable school that has tried for the rich prize since the race was revived in 1926. The field of four fillies and nine colts included all the outstanding three-year-olds of the nation with the exception of Omaha, winner of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont stakes.

10 May Start

The field of 13 original starters may be reduced to 10 before post time around 4 p. m. (Central Standard Time), because of track conditions. Indications were that the racing strip would be slow due to recent heavy rains.

Roman Soldier, victorious in six out of 10 starts this year, and never out of the money, probably will go to the post 6 to 1 favorite, with Col. Edward R. Bradley's great fillies, Black Helen and Bloodroot, as second choice at 5 to 2.

Next in line as public choice was Count Arthur, son of Reign Count, winner of the Kentucky Derby in 1928, the entry of Mrs. D. Herfs of Chicago. The Chicago-owned Nellie Flag, Kentucky Derby favorite, also drew considerable support. The entry of Walter Mc Jeffords, Firethorn and Judy O'Grady also was fancied

Doubtful starters appeared to be Ann O'Ruley, racing in the silks of Mrs. A. A. Baroni of Reno, Nev.; Whopper, the oversized colt belonging to Hal Price Headley of Lexington, Ky., and Joseph J. G., owned by Squatty Louie Peters of Chicago.

Sharkey

Has No Desire to Fight Again

Jack Sharkey, former world's heavyweight champion, has no desire to return to the ring

"I am not planning to fight again," said Sharkey today in answer to reports of his manager, Johnny Buckley, that he would enter the ring again.

"I don't think I could get money enough to make my comeback worth while."

Sharkey added that Buckley was so enthused over the outcome of the Baer-Braddock bout he figured that "I might be able to defeat both of them."

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Trapped in Sewer

Unlucky Lad Spends Twenty Horrible Minutes in a Watery Sepulcher Below City's Streets

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

You know, boys and girls, I get a bigger thrill out of writing up these experiences you send in to me than I did from adventures I have had myself, in person. I am having a lot of fun with this club of ours.

Not a day passes but what I find myself being shipwrecked, or stalked by wild animals, or mixed up in some kind of accident with one of you or another.

Usually it is mighty pleasant to have this job to do every day—keeps the blood tingling in my veins. But this yarn today, from Antonio D'Agostino, Jr., of 201 East 53rd street, New York city, is one that sort of gets me down. For Tony's experience was so terrible that I don't even like to think about it.

It was back in 1927, when they were digging the 53rd street cross-town subway. Little Tony, then seven years old, along with two other boys, Johnny and Jimmy Carr, was playing in the excavation.

The kids had been told not to play in that subway excavation. In fact, they had to dodge the watchmen in order to get there. But the big pit didn't look very dangerous to them, and like kids the world over, they wanted to see what was going on down there.

At the bottom of the excavation the three kids found a manhole—opening into a sewer. Black water rushed and swirled below, but it was far away, and at that distance it made a pleasant, inviting sound to kids looking for excitement. They began bringing rocks from another part of the excavation and throwing them down the hole.

Finally, Tony D'Agostino brought up a rock that was bigger than all the rest. He pushed it into the hole, and leaned far over the edge to watch it fall. For a moment he hung perilously over the edge of that black gaping hole. Then, suddenly, with a startled cry, he fell over the edge into the dark, racing water below.

There was a panic in that excavation as the other kids set up a cry for help. The watchmen heard them, and notified the police and the fire department.

Jimmy Carr ran to Tony's home and told his parents what had happened. Tony's mother fainted. Tony's father raced to the manhole, where he had to be restrained by force from following his boy down into that rush of black, muddy water.

Meanwhile, Tony had been picked up by that rapidly moving stream and was being carried along down into the bowels of the earth beneath the city's streets. After that one scream, he didn't cry any more.

He had to use all his energy to keep his head above water. What was happening to him, he hardly knew. He was too dazed to think. But instinct and the will to live kept him struggling.

Up above, in the streets, they were doing what little they could for Tony. The police emergency squad and the rescue squad of the fire department were opening manholes along the route the sewer followed, were flashing lights and lowering firemen on ropes to see if they could catch sight of the boy.

Nobody seemed to know where the sewer emptied into the river. One report had it that it came to an end at 53rd street and the East River, and a squad of men was sent there to watch. Finally, Daniel Mullane, a plumber, gave some definite information. He told the firemen that it emptied into 49th street.

A battalion chief and several firemen hurried to the river and took a position on the dock near the sewer exit. A man from the Volunteer Life Saving Station nearby got into a rowboat and brought it close to the exit. They waited.

They waited three minutes—four—five. Hope began to ebb. Tony had been underground for twenty minutes now. Chances were that Tony had drowned in that three or four feet of running water—that his body was lying inside, caught against some obstruction.

Suddenly, as the firemen and lifeguards peered at the sewer exit, a black object tumbled out. As it struck the river it gave a scream, and then began to kick and thresh about in the water. In another ten seconds, Tony D'Agostino, frightened, exhausted, covered with mud from head to foot, was lifted into the life-saver's boat.

They took Tony to Bellevue Hospital, where he told a harrowing story. He had been carried along by the water at a rate so rapid that he had been unable to get his feet under him. The swirling of the current had thrown him from side to side, bumping his head and covering his body with bruises.

"It was terrible cold in there, too," he said. "I expect I'll get licked for this."

You know, boys and girls, I have been arguing for a long time that the place to find adventure is not in China, or in Africa, or in Paraguay, or in the bleak and freezing ice fields of the Arctic, but right in your own home town.

But, by golly, Tony D'Agostino has gone me one better. Tony found his big thrill UNDER his home town. He has opened up an entire new field of adventure.

And while I'm not recommending that any of you go jumping into manholes in search of hair-raising experiences like Tony's, I do want you to send in the story of that adventure you have already had.

Don't forget now. And I've got a bird of a yarn for Monday by Peter Mullan of 953 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, it tells of his rough experience in a storm on a steamship crowded with hundreds of cattle.

It's as easy as just reaching for it—and a heck of a lot more fun. That's what hundreds of Boston American readers say of the $10 and $100 bills they have received from headline-hunter Floyd Gibbons for their TRUE adventure stories. Floyd says everybody has had at least one thrilling experience, and he wants to write up yours. Send him the facts, and win a pocketful of dough, like Mrs. Henry W. Gould of Worcester, who drew a $10 check and a $100 prize.

HOW TO WIN $100.00

And Membership in The Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club

It's all very simple. There are no rules, and everyone is eligible. Just write down the facts of your most thrilling adventure and mail it to Floyd Gibbons, care of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston. Remember, the story must be TRUE. Don't worry about how well you can write. Floyd will take care of that. Floyd will pay $10 for every story printed and an extra prize of $100 for the best story of the month. Keep a copy of your story if you wish to have it, AS NO STORIES CAN BE RETURNED. Do not send valuable pictures or souvenirs of your adventure. Send the FACTS.

Greta Garbo Plans to Film Scott O'Dell's Novel

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, June 22—Scott O'Dell, raising oranges near Pomona, probably never dreamed when he was pounding out his novel, "Woman of Spain," that one day it would star Greta Garbo.

Young O'Dell was born in Los Angeles and educated at Cornell and Wisconsin, and while his time has been spent as an orange grower he has attained a place of importance in the literary world.

"Woman of Spain," which is the story of a pioneer family of the year 1815, won him a scholarship and—well, by the time it stars Garbo you are it's Louella O. Parsons to be her first when she returns from her trip abroad! his name will be known all over the world.

Let's pin a medal on our newspaper boys. They are writing more and more of the scenarios for motion pictures. The latest to race home under the wire and win a movie contract is Jack Moffat of the Kansas City Star.

He wrote a newspaper melodrama, "Roaring Girl," which Paramount thought well enough of to purchase for Claudette Colbert and now he is coming to Hollywood to adapt his own story. Fred MacMurray, who played the newspaper man in "The Gilded Lily," will again be Claudette's leading man.

* * *

The silly rumors that Winfield Sheehan is out of Fox or contemplating moving to another company are absolutely unfounded. Winnie is neither going to Paramount as one of its executive heads, nor is he moving to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios. He is staying right at Fox.

You can just never tell where you will find romance in Hollywood. Hugh O'Connell, the comic, playing in "Diamond Jim Brady," had to bounce two girls on his knee and he bounced so hard that he tore the ligaments in his leg and had to be rushed to the hospital. There Hugh met a red-haired nurse who took his fancy, so now he's taking her places and prolonging his suffering.

As is usual in any John Stahl picture there is much changing of cast, story and plans. John, who is very meticulous in all details, can never quite make up his mind on players for his pictures.

Since he took such a long time to decide on "Magnificent Obsession," Warners have recalled Warren Hull who was chosen to play opposite Irene Dunne, and have put handsome Robert Taylor into the part. I am sure only the fact that Stahl goes to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer later makes it possible for him to borrow Bo for he is becoming one of the most popular young actors in the film business.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The BLUMENTHAL-FEARS divorces reported, all set; Blumey, who left for the East with WILLIAM RHINELANDER STEWART, expected back in two weeks for final arrangements; property settlement said to be the only thing holding up the actual divorce proceedings.

The house CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER furnished at the beach, rented by NORMA TALMADGE and GEORGE JESSEL; AL JOLSON slipping into town without a word to anyone, at the Olympic stadium wrestling matches; RUSSELL SIMPSON creating a small sensation when he appeared at his daughter ROBERTA'S graduation with a red beard grown for "Waydown East."

STU ERWIN getting rid of 15 pounds gained on his vacation. That's all today.

Film for Lily Pons

Lily Pons, celebrated star of the Metropolitan Opera, is to arrive in Hollywood soon, where she will make her cinema debut in a musical production tentatively titled "Love Song."

The score of the new production is by Jerome Kern with lyrics by Dorothy Fields. John Cromwell will direct.

"Lamps of China"

New Picture Makes Hit

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Cosmopolitan's long awaited production, "Oil for the Lamps of China," seems destined to become one of the most important pictures of the year.

This excellent new film, with Pat O'Brien and Josephine Hutchinson as its featured players, is occupying the screen of the Metropolitan Theater this week.

George Holland

Director Mervyn LeRoy has dealt justly with Alice Tisdale Hobart's best-selling novel; and its fine cast of players, with particular praise to Mr. O'Brien and Miss Hutchinson, has lifted the new film far out of the ruck of ordinary cinema productions.

* * *

"Lamps of China" is a convincing history of modern pioneering in the Orient. A theme of hearty idealism runs through the story of young American business men, sent out East to promote American business interests and to maintain them in the face of famine, fire, pestilence and death.

Pat O'Brien is one of these young pioneers. He has left a far outpost to go to Yokohama, where he intends to marry. But the girl jilts him, and O'Brien is confronted with the risk of "losing face" with his Chinese associates.

Pretty Josephine Hutchinson solves his problem. The two meet in curious fashion; she is alone in the world, her father having just died; and so they marry, without love, but in a spirit of idealistic co-operation.

Their fight against disappointments, and against the multitude of dangers which beset them in their new life together make a gripping and absorbing film narrative.

* * *

Miss Hutchinson is very lovely and very capable in the role of the wife who enters this strange partnership and keeps her husband from discouragement and failure. Pat O'Brien contributes one of his best screen performances to the film.

Great praise is due a large supporting cast. Jean Muir has some effective emotional scenes as the mother of little Ronnie Corby, who dies in a cholera epidemic. Donald Crisp, John Eldredge, Arthur Byron, Lyle Talbot, and Willie Fung are all excellent.

* * *

A lively stage show is offered at the Met this week. Doyle and Donnelly contribute agreeable comedy, and the Elida Ballet offers some clever dance arrangements, notably one called "The Too Dance in Different Tempos."

Other acts include Dixon and Pal, Paul Nolan, Pops and Louie, and the Demenaiti Troupe.

Here's Mystery

'Ladies Love Danger'

By MARTIN HANNON

When a blonde lady walks into a bachelor's apartment with the explanation that she is waiting to have cocktails with some triplets named Clarke, the bachelor need hardly think poorly of himself for being confused.

But Gilbert Roland is a playwright and a man of the world in "Ladies Love Danger," amusing mystery at the Keith Boston this week.

He is, moreover, something of an amateur sleuth, and he needs to be, for the blonde lady, Mona Barrie, has just come from looking at a new corpse in the next flat.

The cadaver is all that was mortal of "Gardinia" Lopez, Broadway "angel," and a snake in the bargain. A number of people might have killed him. To name only a few, there is Tom Lennox, stage manager, in love with the leading lady of Lopez' show.

The leading lady favors Lopez. There is the mysterious blonde lady herself, who moves in and out of the plot with apparently no good reason. There was Melvin, a jeweler, whom Lopez has threatened with the hoosegow for an alleged swindle.

The plot is pretty complicated; but it moves along nicely and provides a good deal of diversion.

Roland and Miss Barrie, who have been teamed in a lot of mysterious cinema doings lately, are decorative and able in their respective roles of sleuth-playwright and lady-waiting-to-have-cocktails-with-the-Clarke-triplets. And what's more, she does have cocktails with the triplets, providing an ending to a pleasant film.

Other members included in a good cast are Hardie Allbright, Adrienne Ames, Herbert Mundin

Mona Barrie

—who is a delightful butler—Nick Foran and John Wray.

The Keith Boston's co-attraction this week is Damon Runyon's "No Ransom." Lolis Hyams, Phillips Holmes and Jack La Rue are the featured players.

Lively Bill at Orpheum

"Public Hero Number 1," featuring Chester Morris, Lionel Barrymore and Jean Arthur, shares honors this week at Loew's Orpheum, with a lively variety bill headlining Charles "Slim" Timblin.

Timblin, popular blackface comedian, furnishes a good deal of hilarity with a clever comedy skit. A mock marriage provides a merry finale for his turn.

Jean Arthur

More comedy comes from Artie Lewis and his attractive partner, Peggy Ames. This pair have a fast-moving act with plenty of crossfire dialogue, concluding with a novel singing duo.

Dancing—and good dancing—was the offering of the Lynn Burno Revue. Violet West and Justine Justin drew plaudits for a difficult routine of acrobatic dancing, and Ted Wrenn performed well in another clever routine.

Other good acts are Grace Johnston, with a repertoire of tuneful songs, and the Valor Brothers, with a hazardous hand-balancing act.

* * *

"Public Hero Number 1" is another film tribute to the work of the Department of Justice men in their war on crimedom. Chester Morris is seen in the role of a young G-man sent to prison to pick up inside information from an inmate.

The plot is complicated when Morris falls in love with a gangster's sweetheart. Much of the picture is based on fact; and a supporting cast which includes Lionel Barrymore and Joseph Calleia puts this film in the excellent rating.

Joan Stays at State

"No More Ladies," popular film version of A. E. Thomas's hit play of the same name, has entered its second week at Loew's State Theater. Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery are the co-stars.

Joan Crawford

Miss Crawford is cast as Marcia, the young society girl with the bad luck to fall hopelessly in love with a rounder.

The rounder, Robert Montgomery, leads her a merry chase until she turns the tables upon him. Her plot to bring her husband to his senses furnishes the film with amusing situations and sparkling dialogue.

Comedy is in the capable hands of Edna May Oliver and Charles Ruggles. Others in an excellent cast are Franchot Tone, Gail Patrick, Arthur Treacher and Vivienne Osborne.

Pampas Hit at Scollay

The new film bill at the Scollay Square Theater offers Warner Baxter and Ketti Gallian in "Under the Pampas Moon." The co-attraction is a mystery-comedy, "College Scandal," featuring Arline Judge, Kent Taylor, Wendy Barrie, and Eddie Nugent.

Ketti Gallian

"Under the Pampas Moon" is the story of a gaucho whose horse is stolen by a wealthy race-track player. Warner Baxter is the gaucho, and Ketti Gallian is cast as a pretty cafe entertainer who becomes involved in the plot.

The gaucho's pursuit of his stolen horse and a thrilling horse race during which he kidnaps both his steed and Miss Gallian form the story of the film.

"College Scandal" concerns a double murder at a well-known university. The campus editor is killed, to be followed shortly by the slaying of the college song-writer.

The cast is young and good-looking, and there is a song interpolated in the story—"In the Middle of a Kiss"—which has already attained popularity.

Elliott Nugent directed the film. Comedy is furnished by Benny Baker, late stooge to Lou Holtz of stage fame, and by William Frawley and William Benedict.

NEW ENGLAND

Business ACTIVITY Stable

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Business activity in New England so far in 1935 has held to a remarkably stable course. The complete figures for the first four months show but a slight downtrend.

From February through April the activity index of the New England Council reveals a drop of only three tenths of one point. Comparing the first four months of this year with last year brings out the fact business started slowly in 1934 and built up through April. This year things started off with a bang but almost immediately eased off. In fact the dip in the index of 3.9 points from 83, in January to 79.1 in February was by far the largest to date.

Social security legislation promises to hurt one of New England's greatest "industries." The insurance firms of Hartford, Boston, Springfield and many other cities. The exemption amendment of Senator Clark purposely providing a loophole for companies with private pension plans is not considered helpful. The reason is that established companies will find it most difficult, if not impossible to set contracts that will qualify. The insurance companies hope that because provisions and allowances of the security plan are small many private firms will continue to purchase their own pension programs.

While the spectacular gains in points of a handful of stocks are in the limelight the rails have been more than holding their own. Particularly from a percentage standpoint. And this is the feature on which we place the real emphasis. The group became our favorite when 33 flat on the hourly release of the 20 rail stock index was crossed. Dips will naturally take place but for the present there does not seem to be any sound reason for selling holdings. The same applies for food and store stocks.

WESTERN UNION Earnings Shown

An upward tendency in revenues and a better control of operating expenses are reflected in recent net earnings of Western Union Telegraph Co.

Based on preliminary figures for May, and estimates for June, it is indicated that for the six months to June 30 the company will report a profit of close to $1,900,000, or approximately $1.80 a share on 1,045,279 shares.

This would compare with $1,311,389 for the like period last year, or $1.25 a share.

NEW BILL Loaded With POISON

DANGEROUS TO BUSINESS

By John T. Lambert

Washington, June 22—A sugar-coated pill—loaded with poison. That description was placed today upon the new Rayburn-Wheeler bill, which proposes to "regulate" the great public utilities holding companies, in which 12,500 million dollars has been invested by 5,000,000 American security holders.

The bill has been written around President Roosevelt's insistence that the Interstate Holding Companies must be emasculated.

As passed by the Senate, the Rayburn-Wheeler act provided that all except "integrated" holding companies must be exterminated within seven years.

As now being revised by the House committee on interstate commerce, the bill provides that holding companies may be spared outright death if they prove their "necessity and convenience" to the satisfaction of the securities and exchange commission.

This alteration of the bill has been described as "a concession" to the holding companies.

It is "a concession" in that it puts the holding companies into the death house instead of the death chair, according to the protests of the utilities officials.

Philip H. Gadsden, speaking for the committee of public utility executives, was forthright in his condemnation of the new bill.

He charged that the bill had been sponsored by young brain trusters who seek to destroy holding companies in the hope that the operating companies which produce and distribute gas and electric power will be forced into government ownership and operation. Gadsden declared:

"As the sponsors of the bill have also frankly admitted, it is the beginning of a radical attack upon all holding companies, against all business of any size, and will finally seek to take American business out of the hands of the Americans who built it and put it in the hands of bureaucrats who would exploit it to perpetuate their bureaucracy."

The bill, in its original form at least, was largely written by Tom Corcoran and Ben Coen. They are two of the most alert of the brain trust group who have drawn much of their philosophy from Professor Felix Frankfurter.

In its route through the Senate, the section of the complicated bill which proposes to destroy the holding companies outright was adopted by a single vote.

In the House, a somewhat more difficult path has faced the bill. Many of the Democratic Congressmen have threatened to revolt against the President's insistence that it must be adopted in its radical form.

A poll of the House by Democratic floor leaders was said abruptly to have been abandoned when 100 Democrats were quickly found who declared their intention to resist the President.

The poll, it was said, was carried to the White House, but the President's advisers there were unwilling to be convinced of its accuracy.

In any event, the rewriting of the bill with "less drastic provisions," was begun after the poll had revealed the temper of the House.

STOCK Prices Close FIRM

NEW HIGHS RECORDED

New York, June 22 — stock market continued to push forward in today's brief session and many new highs for the year were recorded.

Week-end realizing in the first hour was overcome with little difficulty and bullish activity broadened later. The close was firm.

Optimism apparently ruled in the boardrooms and profit taking was not urgent at any time. Strength was displayed by a few specialties, but the general gains ranged from fractions to around a point. Washington developments, on the whole, did not seem to disturb sentiment.

Grains were unsympathetic, the major cereals sagging on improved weather reports. Cotton was steady. Foreign exchanges were narrow. Secondary bonds advanced.

Shares of Air Reduction and American Can got up more than 2 points each, and American Tobacco "B" and Allied Chemical were nearly as much higher. Other advances wer registered by Du Pont, Safeway Stores, Montgomery Ward, Chrysler, General Motors, Philip Morris, Johns-Manville, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Kennecott, American Smelting, International Telephone, American Telephone, Consolidated Gaas, North American, Bethlehem Steel, and Electric Auto Lite. Most of the rail and oils were unchanged to slightly improved.

Spotty Items

Market observers advanced various reasons for being more hopeful concerning the long-term aspects of securities. The pressure of idle funds for employment was cited as still one of the most important sustaining influences.

In addition, the belief was expressed in some quarters that, barring exceptionally bad news, industrial activities this fall will be considerably ahead of the same 1934 period.

It was recalled that last year a more than seasonal trade decline was experienced with the closing of plants early in July and a subsequent come-back was less than normal.

The thought in the financial district was that the President's higher tax program may not get through Congress this session and the opinion was voiced that, before the next term, administrative forces might feel much different about the "distribution-of-wealth" plan.

The action of the House Interstate Commerce Committee in shearing the Utility Holding Company Bill brightened the outlook for owners of power loans and equities.

Announcement that retail cigarette prices, which dropped when the NRA codes were invalidated, would be raised next week, cheered followers of tobacco stocks.

Farm equipments were firm as were the mail order and merchandising shares. Foods, aviations and specialities marked time.

Railroad shares also turned quiet as Atchison, Illinois Central, Southern Pacific and Southern Railway registered only minor changes.

Commodity markets were mixed with grains down fractionally and cotton slightly higher in light trading.

WASHINGTON

Incites WALL STREET Jitters

By B. C. Forbes

More bombshells. Washington once again plunged Wall Street into something savoring of pandemonium.

Overnight came news of President Roosevelt's latest far-reaching recommendations that Congress "soak the rich," by grabbing a large part of big fortunes bequeathed or given away before death, by taking a still heavier portion of very big incomes through taxation and by inflicting a much heavier income tax rate on huge than on moderate enterprises.

Then, overnight, the House passed the Wagner labor disputes bill, universally regarded by employers as wholly unfair to them, and as paving the way for unions to dominate all companies and, probably, all workers.

On top of this, the most colossal social experiment ever conceived by any government was overwhelmingly approved by the Senate, despite the earnest and insistent pleadings of employers that a measure of such incalculable ramifications as the social security bill be given far more study before enactment.

The New York Stock Exchange opened excitedly, nervously, bearishly. Investors dumped their securities on the market, regardless of the prices realized. Quotations tumbled.

Only utility shares held up relatively well. The explanation? Encouraging prospects that the "death sentence" on all holding companies would not be finally passed by Congress despite the President's vehement urgings.

The net conviction driven home in the business and industrial world by these latest happenings at Washington is that the administration has cast overboard all former intimations and promises that it planned to seek the co-operation of fillers of pay envelopes in bringing about economic and employment recovery; also, that President Roosevelt is thoroughly determined to wage war against all forms of large-scale enterprises.

Thus has our national outlook again become embedded in thickest fog.

Men of affairs are more uncertain now than ever before concerning what will happen in the realms of business, industry, investment, and labor.

Nor are they at all sure that President Roosevelt's latest moves will not prove politically popular among large sections of the people, especially among those who cannot see the fundamental dangers involved in "soaking the rich," in harassing and dismembering the enterprise which have contributed most to furnishing work, to supporting the government by tax payments and by competing effectively in world markets, thus bringing new wealth as well as employment to America and Americans.

One business man's comment: "President Roosevelt's activities represent better politics than statesmanship."

Events will tell.
